an easement in a grant of property depends on the common intention of the parties; here there was no evidence that it was not the intention of the parties to the conveyance that creeper & gate-post should remain, & therefore an easement in each case was impliedly reserved; there was, however, a duty on the part of the grantee to use care that the grantor's property was not unduly interfered with; deft. in allowing the creeper to obstruct pltf.'s gutter had failed to use necessary care, & as to this part of the case the award as to damages must stand.—SIMPSON v. WEBER (1925), 133 L. T. 46; 41 T. L. R. 302, D. C.

515. For the paragraph in the original volume substitute the following paragraph:—

— Acquiescence in obstruction of way.—

In 1870 a row of houses was put up for sale by auction in eleven lots. One of the conditions was that a strip of land fifteen feet in width, running the entire length of the lots & being the rear portions of the back gardens of the houses, was intended to form a right of way from the back garden of each house into Church Road, which bounded the side of lot 1 on the south, & that the lots would be sold subject to & with the benefit of such right of way, & that the respective purchasers should at the earliest possible moment remove the fifteen feet of end garden wall & form the right of way. This condition was recited in each of the conveyances. Lot 1 was conveyed subject to the right of way of the owners of the other lots & lots 2 & 3 with the benefit of & subject to the right of way. The purchaser of lot 1 let it for a term of fifty years, which expired on June 15, 1922, subject to the right of way. In 1904 pltf. took an assignment of this lease, & in 1911 he purchased the fee simple of lots 2 & 3, with the benefit & subject to the right of way.

Deft. was the present owner of lot 1. For fifty years from the date of the original sale no attempt was made to form the proposed roadway, the garden walls dividing the several lots remained intact, & the wall separating lot 1 from Church Road was not breached. Church Road was six feet above the level of the back gardens. In 1883 the original lessee of lot 1 in the course of erecting some stables in his back garden raised the surface of the strip of land at the end of his lot to the level of Church Road, with the result that there was a drop of six feet from that strip into lot 2. In 1919 pltf., in anticipation of the expiration of his lease, proposed to build a garage on lots 2 & 3. With that object in view he pulled down part of the wall which separated the rear portion of lot 1 from Church Road & erected gates there, & he also raised the level of the rear portion of lot 2; & subsequently he caused a car to be driven through the gates over the strip in lot 1 into lot 2. On the expiration of the lease deft. blocked up the gates & obstructed the way. In an action by pltf. as owner of lots 2 & 3 to enforce his right of way against the deft.:—Held: (1) until the land was cleared there could be no effectual creation of a right of way; (2) having regard to the time which had elapsed before any purchaser attempted to assert his rights under the original conveyance, the inevitable inference was that the arrangement made in 1870 had been abandoned by common consent.—SWAN v. SINCLAIR, [1925] A. C. 227; 94 L. J. Ch. 104; 132 L. T. 577; 89 J. P. 38; 41 T. L. R. 158; 22 L. G. R. 705, H. L.

Where pltf. & his predecessors in title had failed to exercise a right of way had fenced off their land, so as to shut off the right of way & had omitted any specific mention of the right in various conveyances:—Held: an abandonment was established.—*CHRISTOPHER v. 1399. For the paragraph in the original volume substitute the following paragraph:—

—.]—Chancery Amendment Act, 1858 (c. 27), s. 2, confers on the Ct. of Ch. jurisdiction to award damages in lieu of an injunction in the case of a threatened injury. Notwithstanding the repeal of that Act by Statute Law Revision & Civil Procedure Act, 1883 (c. 49), the combined effect of Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 16, & Statute Law Revision Act, 1898 (c. 22), s. 1, is to maintain in force the jurisdiction conferred by Chancery Amendment Act, 1858, s. 2.

Where therefore an action was brought in the Ch. Div. for an injunction to restrain an obstruction of ancient lights, & the ct. found that defts.' buildings when completed would cause an actionable obstruction to pltf.'s lights, but that no such obstruction had yet taken place:—Held: the ct. had jurisdiction to award damages in lieu of an injunction.—LEEDS INDUSTRIAL CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD. v. SLACK, [1924] A. C. 851; 93 L. J. Ch. 436; 131 L. T. 710; 40 T. L. R. 745; 68 Sol. Jo. 715, H. L.; revsg. S. C. sub nom. SLACK v. LEEDS INDUSTRIAL CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD., [1923] 1 Ch. 431, C. A.; subsequent proceedings, [1924] 2 Ch. 475, C. A.

1399a. —.]—In an action brought by pltf. against deft. society for an injunction & damages in respect of an alleged obstruction of ancient lights, the judge found that defts.' buildings when completed would cause an actionable obstruction to pltf.'s lights, but that no such obstruction had yet taken place, & he expressed the opinion that the interference with pltf.'s legal rights when the building was completed would be small, & could be adequately compensated by damages, but held, contrary to his own opinion, that he was bound by the opinion of the Ct. of Appeal in Dreyfus v. Peruvian Guano Co. (1889), 43 Ch. D. 316, that there was no jurisdiction under Chancery Amendment Act, 1858 (c. 27), to give damages in lieu of an injunction where the injury was threatened but had not been sustained, & he therefore granted an injunction. The Ct. of Appeal, without going into the merits, by a majority, upheld the view that the ct. had no jurisdiction in such a case to award damages in lieu of an injunction. The House of Lords, by a majority, reversed this decision, & remitted the case to the Ct. of Appeal to deal with it on its merits:—Held: the findings of the judge brought the case within the "good working rule" suggested by A. L. SMITH, L.J., in Shelfer v. City of London Electric Lighting Co., No. 1356, ante, as that which might guide the ct. in exercising the discretion given it by Chancery Amendment Act, 1858, to award damages in lieu of an injunction; that was still the rule to be adopted by the ct. as a guide & was not affected by anything that was decided in Colls v. Home & Colonial Stores, No. 830, ante; therefore, there being evidence to support the findings of the judge, the injunction granted by him, contrary to his own opinion, ought to be discharged, & in lieu thereof an inquiry directed as to damages.—SLACK v. LEEDS INDUSTRIAL CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD., [1924] 2 Ch. 475; 94 L. J. Ch. 46, C. A.

— — — — — Approval of decorations & fittings.] —On the hearing in the Consistory Ct. of London of a petition as to the furniture & fittings of the Church of St. Magnus-the-Martyr, in the City of London, a faculty was granted for, amongst other things: (1) a second Holy Table; (2) an image of the Virgin & Holy Child placed behind the second Holy Table; & (3) a crucifix fixed to a pillar at a considerable height from the floor & near the pulpit. On appeal the Ct. of Arches dismissed the appeal as to (1) & (3), but allowed it as to (2):—Held: (1) the law was the same for every kind of sacred image in a church, including a crucifix or rood, & although such an image was not illegal per se, it could not lawfully be placed in a church without a faculty.

On an application for such a faculty, the question to be considered is whether, if the faculty be granted, there is or is not, in the particular case, a danger of the image being used for purposes of worship or adoration condemned by Article of Religion 22. After discussion of the kind of evidence proper to this inquiry:—Held: (2) there was a danger of the proposed image of the Virgin & Holy Child being so used; (3) an image used for purposes of worship or adoration was an ornament & was illegal, because not included amongst the ornaments of the church sanctioned by the Ornaments Rubric in the Book of Common Prayer; (4) a faculty authorising the erection of an image in a church should not be absolute, but until further order.

(5) The other matter of appeal is the second Holy Table. The church holds, or will hold, between three hundred & four hundred people, & there are a large number of celebrations every week. In those circumstances it would be a matter of course to allow a second Holy Table, but for the exceptional character of the ceremonial & services of this church. I am not, however, disposed to interfere with the exercise of the learned Chancellor's discretion in this part of the case. I think there ought to be full plans & particulars of the decorations & fittings of & surrounding the second Holy Table, & these fittings ought to be subject to the approval of the learned Chancellor & to be specifically included in the faculty (SIR LEWIS DIBDIN).—*VINCENT v. Act & a decree made pursuant to it & having the force of a statute, the lessees of houses & all other hereditaments, with certain im-material exceptions, situated in the City of London, are liable to pay a tithe of 2s. 9d. for every rent of 20s. by the year, “& so above the rent of 20s. by the year by the rate aforesaid.” The decree contained a proviso that in the case of premises in respect be paid for tithes before 1545, the date of the above Act, the premises should be exempted from the prescribed rate. In an action by 3513b. Cost of investment of redemption money—Compulsory redemption—Jurisdiction of court to deal with.—By a settlement dated in 1893 certain tithe rentcharges payable out of lands situate at W. were settled, subject to certain life interests which had determined, to the use of H. for life with remainders over. The settlement contained a proviso appointing the trustees of the settlement trustees for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts, & providing that a sole trustee should be competent to act for all the purposes of the Acts, including the receipt of capital money. In 1899 H. assigned his life interest in the rentcharges to C. In 1905 C. died, having by his will devised his real & personal estate to resps. & appointed them his exors. In 1922 applt., who was the owner of the land out of which certain of the tithe rentcharges were payable, in exercise of the power given him by Tithe Act, 1918 (c. 54), s. 3, applied to the Ministry of Agriculture & Fisheries for the redemption of certain of these charges, amounting to £48 10s. 8d. & 5s. respectively, & for the determination by the Minister of the amount of the consideration money payable in respect thereof. On Sept. 20, 1922, resps., in exercise of their option under Tithe Act, 1846 (c. 73), s. 9, signed a form of consent which had been sent to them by the Ministry to the payment of the consideration money to the surviving trustee of the settlement of 1893. A month later they wrote to the Ministry revoking their consent & requesting that the money might be paid into ct. The Ministry thereupon wrote to applt. directing him to pay the money into ct., which he accordingly did. On Feb. 12, 1923, resps. took out an originating summons for an order that the fund in ct. might be invested & the income therefrom paid to resps. or the survivor of them as & when received during the life of the tenant for life:—Held: (1) on an application to invest money paid into ct. representing compensation paid under the Tithe Acts on the redemption of rentcharges, there was no general principle that required the ct. to direct that the person exercising the compulsory powers under the Acts should bear the burden of the costs, but the costs were, under Jud. Act, 1890 (c. 44), s. 5, in the discretion of the ct. entirely unfettered by any such general principle; the ct. below ought to have exercised its discretion by holding that applt., who had been brought before the ct. solely for the purpose of making him liable for costs, was not so liable, & to have dismissed the application as against him with costs.

(2) Semble: there is no power in the Tithe Acts which enables a tithe owner who has once exercised the option given him by the Act of 1846, s. 9, to revoke or alter the exercise of it.—Re WARTLING TITHE REDEMPTION, [1924] 2 Ch. 123; 93 L. 14a. ———.]—Pltfs., assistant teachers in the employ of deft. council, claimed injunctions to restrain the council from acting on resolutions to dismiss them from their employment & notices sent to them in pursuance thereof. The council were in financial difficulties, & had approached the Minister of Health with a view to obtaining a further loan. This had been refused, unless the finances were placed on a sound footing & expenses reduced. With a view to achieving this result they appointed a sub-committee with full powers to scrutinise expenditure & effect reductions & savings. This committee recommended that pltfs., who were remunerated on the Burnham scale, should have their engagements determined by notice. Acting in pursuance thereof the committee passed the resolutions complained of, & notices were sent out determining the contracts signed by their clerk :—Held : (1) it was clear that it had become necessary to practise strict economy, & judicial notice could be taken of the fact that at the time pltfs. were remunerated on the highest scale of the Burnham award. The council in considering these questions were acting in pursuance of their statutory obligations, & no objection could be entertained as to the validity of the notices on the ground of motive. (2) There was power to delegate under 1921 Act, s. 4 (2), & the committee had vested in them the duty of ascertaining how best savings could be brought about. On their report the notices of dismissal had been prepared & sent to pltfs., signed by the clerk of the council. That was a sufficient ratification of what the committee had done, & pltfs.' claim failed.—RICHARDSON v. ABERTILLERY URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL, THOMAS v. SAME (1928), 138 L. T. 688 ; 92 J. These stakes were pressed into the ground & brought together at the top in the form of a pyramid. The area covered by the trees had become overgrown with grass, & in that area a hole had been dug, & the earth heaped up at the side of it, forming a mound two or three feet in height. authority, in pursuance of a recommendation of their education committee, made after exhaustive inquiries & discussion, resolved that the engagements of all married women teachers falling under certain specified categories should be terminated; &, accordingly, notice was given to each of pltfs. to terminate her engagement. Pltfs., three married women, had for several years been engaged under contracts terminable by a month's notice on either side, as assistant certificated teachers in some of defts.' schools, & were admittedly efficient teachers. It was proved that the object of the council in reducing the number of the married women teachers was to create vacancies for unemployed single women teachers whom the council trained for the teaching profession & for whom it was important in the interest of educational efficiency that teaching posts should be provided. In carrying out that policy, the council, with the view of minimising cases of hardship in the selection of married women teachers for dismissal, took into consideration the domestic circumstances & duties of the married women teachers & the earning capacity of their husbands. Pltfs. sought declarations that the notices of dismissal were invalid on the ground that the council in giving them did not act bonâ fide with the intention of discharging their statutory duties of maintaining educational efficiency, but acted with the illegitimate object of providing employment for unmarried women without reference to educational efficiency, of obliging married women teachers to confine themselves to home duties & of preventing those whose husbands were in regular employment from increasing the income of the joint home:—Held: (1) pltfs. failed to discharge the onus which lay upon them of showing that the policy adopted by the council of reducing the number of the married women teachers for the purpose of creating vacancies for unemployed single women teachers, & the steps taken to carry it out, were in excess of their statutory powers or were adopted or taken in pursuance of some illegitimate object; (2) the matters taken into consideration by the council were irrelevant from an educational standpoint, but were material factors in determining, not only whether the policy ought to be adopted, but the best method of applying it; (3) as defts. had acted bonâ fide & within their statutory powers, the action ought to be dismissed.—*FENNELL v. Amongst the voting papers was one containing a vote for petitioner, by writing his name & address on the voting paper, as a county alderman. Forty-four voting papers contained votes for resp. as a county alderman. Neither petitioner nor resp. had before the election declared himself to be a candidate at the election of county aldermen. Resp. declared himself to be elected amongst others a county alderman, & petitioner was not elected. Petitioner, alleging himself to have been a candidate at the election, presented a petition against the election of resp.:—Held: petitioner was not right in alleging himself to have been a candidate at the election for county aldermen, as he had not been elected & had not declared himself before the election as a candidate for election, & the writing by the voter of petitioner's name & address on the voting paper did not amount to a nomination of him as candidate within Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (c. 50), s. 77, & he was not, under s. 88 of the Act, entitled to present a petition for the purpose of questioning the election of resp.—CAMBRIDGE COUNTY COUNCIL CASE, FORDHAM v. Sect. 6 of the Order prohibited the supply of energy by defts. beyond their area of supply, & Electric Lighting Act, 1909 (c. 34), s. 23, contains a general prohibition against supplying energy outside an authorised area. Defts. entered into a contract to supply a firm having a small part of its premises within defts.' area of supply & the remainder of the premises in the relators' area of supply. For the purpose of this contract defts. erected their apparatus on the part of the premises of the firm within their area, & the consumers' terminals, that is, the point where the electricity was passed from defts.' service lines to the lines on the firm's premises owned & controlled by them, were also on that part of the premises. The use of electricity on this part of the premises was trivial. In the circumstances the A.-G. brought an action on the relation of the relators to restrain defts. from supplying energy to the firm outside their area:—Held: the point of supply was the consumers' terminals, & as the firm's terminals were — Not incompatible with performance of statutory duties.—By a Provisional Order of 1898 the B. Council were constituted electricity undertakers in B. with power to charge up to a certain maximum price, but with authority to make special agreements with particular consumers as to price. By a transfer deed of Dec. 31, 1901, approved by the Board of Trade, the B. Council transferred the undertaking to defts. with a provision for retransfer if defts. made default in their obligations as undertakers. By a supplemental deed of same date, made without the approval of the Board of Trade, defts. agreed with the B. Council not to charge higher prices than those charged in the adjoining borough of S. In 1911 the B. district & the contractual rights of the B. Council were transferred to pltfs., the S. Corpn., but defts. still remained electricity undertakers in B. Defts. having recently begun to charge higher prices than pltfs., pltfs. brought an action to restrain their breach of agreement. Defts. contended that their agreement was ultra vires both under Electric Lighting Act, 1882 (c. 56), s. 11, which prevented them from divesting themselves of their statutory powers without the consent of the Board of Trade, & also under the general law applicable to statutory undertakings:—Held: the agreement was a business transaction into which defts. might reasonably enter; it did not fetter the powers of defts. & was not incompatible with the performance by them of their statutory duties, & was not therefore ultra vires.—*SOUTHPORT CORPN. v. The expression "all other machinery" construed ejusdem generis with the words "dynamoes, poles & wires" does not include transformers, switches or electric bulbs in private houses or factories, & which would only benefit the individual ratepayers & not the general body of the ratepayers.—*Ex p. In 1877 the freeholds, the undivided share in which was devised to P. for life, were sold under Leases & Sales of Settled Estates Act, 1856 (c. 120), & the proceeds of sale representing such share were paid into ct. After the sale W., who had previously executed a disentailing deed dealing in general terms with the lands devised to him by testator's will, executed another disentailing deed dealing in terms with the undivided share & the money in ct. resulting from the sale thereof. Neither of these deeds was executed with the consent of P. as the protector of the settlement. W. died in the lifetime of P. having by his will devised his residuary real estate to applt. & bequeathed his personal estate to resps. At the death of P. in 1920 applt. petitioned for payment out of ct. of the money, claiming that it had passed to him as residuary devisee of W.:—Held: the money retained the character of real estate inasmuch as Fines & Recoveries Act, 1833, s. 71, did not convert disentailed money into personal estate for all purposes, but merely directed that it should be treated as personal estate for the purpose of the form of a disentailing deed.—Re DICKSON'S SETTLED ESTATES, [1921] 2 Ch. 108; 90 L. Testator possessed at the date of his will an undivided moiety in some thirty-seven acres of freehold land at D., ten & a half acres of which he had, in 1921, contracted to sell. He died in 1925, before the purchase had been completed, & owing to difficulties of title completion did not take place until Dec.

1925:—Held: the will having been made after the date of the contract for sale, & with full knowledge of that contract, indicated an intention, as shown by the reference to proceeds of sale, to pass whatever estate testator had in the property, though it was only part of his freehold land at D., to the specific devisees.—*Re CALOW, CALOW v. There was no issue of the marriage. The real estate was not sold in the lifetime of the wife, who accepted the benefits under her husband's will & died in 1921:—Held: inasmuch as at his death testator's interest was a contingent reversionary interest in personalty, contingent upon the event of no posthumous child being born who might attain a vested interest, & reversionary because it was expectant upon his wife's life interest, testator was not competent to effect a reconversion by his will, because he never became entitled to an absolute interest in the property before his death, & the property passed under his will as personalty.—Re STURT, DE BUNSEN v. HARDINGE, [1922] 1 Ch. 416; 91 L. J. Ch. 289; 126 L. T. 460; 66 Sol. Jo. 236.

90a. ——— Trust established in England. By his will, made in English form, testator, who declared that the instrument was to take effect according to the law of Hong Kong where he was domiciled, devised & bequeathed his property, which was situate out of the United Kingdom, to trustees on trust to invest a sum to produce an annuity for his wife, to pay certain legacies & to stand possessed of the residue to pay the annual income thereof to his sons or son during their or his lives or life, & on the death of the last survivor of his sons in trust for his son's children. The tenant for life, who was the only son of testator living at his death, wished to borrow money &, at the request of the lenders, he appointed, in England, four new trustees of the will, three of whom were resident in England. Between 1913 & 1922, owing to the tenant for life's dealings with the trust funds, proceedings in the Ch. Div. were instituted & orders were made in connection with the administration of the trusts of the will. In 1922 the tenant for life died, leaving him surviving his widow & two infant sons, who were domiciled in Hong Kong but had been made wards of ct. by virtue of the proceedings in the Ch. Div. & the orders made therein. The trust property was situate abroad :—Held : the succession of the infants to testator's residuary estate was at his death a succession by virtue of Hong Kong law & to Hong Kong property, & it had never lost that character or fallen within 1853 Act, s. 2, & the property was not liable to estate duty under 1894 Act, s. 2 (2). —*A.-G. v. 96a. ——— Shares.]—Testator, a German subject, was, at the outbreak of the European War, entitled to stocks, shares, & securities in English, South African, & American cos. The certificates were in all cases situate in London, & the securities themselves were transferable in London at the outbreak of war, & at the date of testator's death. Testator died in 1915, in Berlin, being domiciled in Germany. By his will three-fifths of his property were bequeathed to German & Austrian beneficiaries, & two-fifths to British & Polish beneficiaries. In 1915 the will was proved in Germany by the exors. named therein. In 1922, grant of administration in England was made to pltf. By virtue of Treaty of Peace Orders, the whole of the interests of the German & Austrian beneficiaries became charged with & subject to the claims of the Custodian of Enemy Property. In 1922 all the South African securities were transferred to the South African Custodian, an exor. dative was appointed in South Africa to administer testator's South African estate, & estate duty in South Africa was paid by him in respect thereof. Some of the American securities were transferred to the American Alien Property Custodian, administration of testator's American estate was granted in America, & the securities were transferred to the American Custodian to be distributed by the American administrator among the beneficiaries. All the remaining American securities, with the exception of a small balance, were released to pltf. by the English Custodian. In May, 1924, pltf. filed a corrective affidavit, including therein those of the American securities which had been released to him at that date, & he paid estate duty & interest in respect thereof:—Held: (1) all the shares were locally situate in England & the administrator was bound to include them as property of which testator was competent to dispose, & was accountable to the extent of the assets he had received for the estate duty in respect thereof; (2) the basis of valuation of such shares was the price similar shares would fetch in the open market at the date of testator's death.—*Re ASCHROTT, CLIFTON v. At her death in 1918 the furniture was sold for £45,000, & the Crown claimed succession duty & estate duty upon the difference between the two sums from the trustee of the settlements:—Held: (1) the transaction was a bond fide sale between mother & son, & no succession duty was payable; (2) as to the claim for estate duty, there had been a "purchase for partial consideration" within 1894 Act, s. 3 (2), the consideration paid represented four-fifths of the value of the property at the date of such purchase, & estate duty was payable only upon one-fifth of the value as at the date of the death of the tenant for life; (3) "partial consideration," in sect. 3 (2), meant something less than the full & fair value as between buyer & seller.—Re BATEMAN (BARONESS), [1925] 2 K. 128a. "Land & chattels"—What are "chattels."—By an Act of 54 Geo. 3 an annuity of £2,000 was inalienably settled on Lord E. & his successors in title. In 1892 the redemption of the annuity for a sum of £55,890 was agreed upon, & that amount was paid into ct. & invested in the purchase of Consols. The fifth Viscount E. died in Aug. 1922, & the sixth Viscount in Feb. 1923. Questions having arisen as to the payment of estate duty, the ct. was asked whether estate duty became payable (a) upon the capital of the sum of Consols, or (b) upon the value of the interest of the successor to the title in such sum of Consols, & if estate duty became so payable, then whether, for the purpose of determining the rate of estate duty, such sum of Consols ought (a) to be aggregated with the other property, or (b) to be treated as an estate by itself:—Held: "chattels" in collocation with settled lands in 1894 Act, s. 5 (5), did not suggest personality generally, but those particular items of it which were usually settled upon trusts that followed the devolution of the settled land, & the sum of Consols was not "chattels" within the sub-sect., & must be aggregated with the other property for the purpose of paying estate duty.—Re EXMOUTH'S ANNUITY, [1925] Ch. 280; 94 L. s ii. ———.—Discharge by son of legitim.—A father granted a bond for £30,000 in implement of an undertaking by him in his second son's marriage contract, in contemplation of the son's marriage, & in consideration of a conveyance executed by the son's intended wife for behoof of the spouses. In the marriage contract the son accepted the obligations therein contracted by his father as in full satisfaction in any event of all legal claims for legitim or otherwise he might have upon his father's estate. At the date of the marriage contract & of the bond the only claim to legitim possible to the son was in the event of his elder brother predeceasing his father. That event happened, & at the father's death the amount of legitim to which the second son would have had a claim, had he not discharged it, was £25,000:—Held: the bond could not be regarded as a debt incurred by the father for full consideration in money or money's worth wholly for deceased's own use & benefit in the sense of 1894 Act, s. 7 (1), & did not form a proper deduction in determining the value of his estate for the purposes of estate duty.—LORD ADVOCATE v.

sa. "Interest in business"—What is—1914 Act, s. 15.]—A father & two of his sons carried on business in partnership. By a re-arrangement of the partnership relations the father accepted £124,646 in full of his whole rights in the old firm & its assets, & agreed to allow this sum to remain as a loan to the new firm at 4 per cent. interest, on condition that, if called up by him, or in any event on his death, it was to be repaid by ten yearly instalments. The father contributed no capital to the new firm apart from the loan, but had an interest in the profits to the extent of a one-tenth share. He died in 1922, leaving a will by which he bequeathed the residue of his estate, including the loan, to his family, & estate duty was duly paid thereon. The two sons came to an arrangement with their father's exors., under which the sons agreed to repay the loan at once in return for a certain discount; & in settling with the exors., they retained in the business the respective shares of the loan falling to them, by crediting themselves with the amounts in the books of the firm. Within two years of the father's death one of the sons died, & estate duty became payable on his estate. His exor. having claimed a reduction, under the above sect., of the estate duty payable on the sum credited to the son in the firm's books in respect of his share of his father's loan:—Held: the father's right to repayment of the loan was not an "interest in the business" within the sect., & the sum standing in the son's name in the books of the firm was an interest in the assets of the firm, & was not identical with his father's interest in the jus credit of the loan.—*GLEN v. 161a. .]—A rentcharge of £50,000 per annum charged on L. settled estates was limited to the use of deft., the fourth Viscount P., for life with remainder to the use of his eldest son during his life, to commence from their respective successions to the title & to be paid without any deduction except for death duties, & a similar rentcharge was limited in remainder, in the event of any other issue of the fourth Viscount succeeding to the title, to the use of the sons of such eldest son & other sons of the fourth Viscount in tail male. Subject to such rentcharge, the L. settled estates were limited to the use of pltf. for life with remainder to the use of his eldest son for life with remainders over. By a deed poll dated Oct. 15, 1913, provision was made for the abatement of the £50,000 rentcharge in certain events. The third Viscount, who was tenant for life of the estates in question, had died in 1923, while nine of the sixteen half-yearly instalments of estate duty payable in respect of the death of the second Viscount, who had died in 1919, remained unpaid. One of the questions for the decision of the ct. at the original hearing of the summons (Re Portman (Viscount), No. 249, post) was as to what proportion of the balance remaining unpaid at the death of the third Viscount of the estate duty, which became assessable on the death of the second Viscount in respect of the L. estates, should be borne by the yearly rentcharge of £50,000, & it was admitted in argument that there was no difference in principle in respect of that unpaid balance between that duty & that which was assessable upon the death of the third Viscount. After judgment had been delivered & before the minutes had been finally drawn up, leave was given to withdraw the admission made in argument as aforesaid, & it was directed that the question with regard to the liability of the rentcharge in respect of the unpaid instalments of estate duty assessable on the death of the second Viscount should be argued:—Held: the effect of 1894 Act, s. 14 (1), was to throw the incidence of the duty ratably & in proper proportions upon all persons becoming beneficially interested in the property upon which the duty was constituted a first charge by force of sect. 9 (1) of the Act; the rentcharge, or the abated rentcharge, must be dealt with, as regards these unpaid instalments, in the manner indicated in the original judgment; & the order would be in the terms of the minutes prepared in accordance with that judgment.—Re PORTMAN (VISCOUNT) (No. 2), [1925] Ch. 294; 94 L. purchase of a house, handed to deft., as his agent, the amount of the deposit & the balance of £490 payable to the vendor on completion & instructed deft. to pay this balance to the vendor when completion took place. Completion did not take place, & pltf. demanded the above balance from deft. & brought an action against him to recover it. The vendor claimed that pltf. was liable to him for £100 damages & directed deft. not to pay over that sum to pltf. Deft. thereupon issued an interpleader summons in respect of the £100, & the master directed an issue, & ordered that deft. should pay into ct. the £100 less his costs. On the trial of the issue the vendor's claim was dismissed. Pltf. then obtained leave to sign judgment for £390, for which deft. admitted liability. Pltf. now claimed the additional £100 in full without any deduction of deft.'s costs. Deft. contended that the master's order allowing deft. to deduct his costs was final:—Held: the master's order allowing the deduction of costs was not res judicata, but merely relieved deft. from paying the full £100 until the decision of the interpleader issue & the result of the action, & pltf. was entitled to recover the full £100.—ALLNUTT v. 296a. Admission.]—Under a will the annual income from an estate in Australia was divisible by the trustees between testator's daughters. The trustees objected to an assessment for the financial year 1918–1919 under Land Tax Assessment Act, 1910–1916, of Australia; they claimed under sect. 38 (7) of the Act a deduction of £5,000 in respect of the share of each daughter, & a case was stated for the opinion of the Full Ct. of the High Ct. upon the questions: (1) whether the shares of the joint owners, or of any & which of them, in the land were original shares within sect. 38; (2) how many deductions of £5,000 resp. should make. The Full Ct. answered these questions as follows: (1) the shares of the six children surviving at the date of the assessment; (2) six. Upon the assessment for 1919–1920 the comr. allowed only one deduction of £5,000, contending that the beneficiaries were not joint owners within the Act. Upon a case stated the Full Ct. upheld that view, & held that the comr. was not estopped by the previous decision:—Held: the comr. was estopped, since although in the previous litigation no express decision had been given whether the beneficiaries were joint owners, it being assumed & admitted that they were, the matter so admitted was fundamental to the decision then given.—HOYSTEAD v. - 1148a. —. —.]—Defts., warehousemen & wharfingers, held 600 quarters of maize belonging to A., who sold 200 quarters thereof to W. & Co., who sold them to pltf., giving to the latter a delivery note, which they lodged with defts. Defts. did not acknowledge it or object to it, but some days later, no weighing out or appropriation of the 200 quarters having taken place, A. stopped delivery. It was contended that on the sale to W. & Co. the latter became tenants in common with A. of the 600 quarters, with the right in W. & Co. to assign their interest therein to pltf., although no appropriation of the 200 quarters had taken place:—Held: (1) pltf. had no claim to the maize; (2) defts. & A. were not estopped from denying that pltf. were the owners of the 200 quarters of maize.

1610a. ——.]—Defts. received a consignment of wheat & issued a delivery order for it, which came into the hands of B. Upon this delivery order B. obtained advances from pltfs. Shortly afterwards defts. issued a second delivery order in respect of the same consignment of wheat. The two delivery orders were different, & such as might reasonably be supposed to relate to distinct consignments of wheat. Upon this second delivery order B. obtained further advances from pltfs., who were under the belief that the delivery orders related to distinct consignments of wheat. B. having afterwards become insolvent:—Held: defts. having been guilty of culpable negligence, & such negligence having been the proximate cause of pltfs. loss, were estopped from alleging that the two delivery orders related to the same consignment of wheat, & were liable to compensate pltfs. for the loss sustained by them through the advances to B.—*COVENTRY v. The judge refused to do so. Witnesses were then called for the defence. The jury disagreed. Subsequently an application was made to the judge to enter judgment for defts. upon the above ground & also upon the ground that upon all the evidence in the case the jury could not reasonably have found a verdict for pltf. The judge having refused to enter judgment for defts.:—Held: (1) a judge at the trial had power to enter judgment for deft. if upon the case as a whole the evidence of pltf. was so weak that a verdict in his favour would have been set aside as unreasonable.

924a. ———.]—Ct. of Probate Act, 1857 (c. 77), s. 73, confers wide powers on the ct. Under it an exor., not willing or competent to take probate, may be replaced by an administrator to be appointed by the ct., if it shall appear to be necessary or convenient by reason of special circumstances. Misfeasance on the part of an exor. with regard to the estate of his testator is a ground for proceeding under the sect., even after the exor. has inter-meddled.

Exors. had intermeddled & neglected to prove the will, & had made an agreement with the universal legatee that the will should not be proved. In passing them over the ct. ordered that a grant of administration should be made to a third person to be agreed upon by the exors. & the legatee, or in default to be appointed by the ct.—In the Estate of POTTICARY, [1927] P. 202; 96 L. The position of such exors. differs from that of persons named as exors. in a testamentary paper which they unsuccessfully propound. Having established the validity of the will, & made good their position as testator's exors., they are entitled to their costs of the litigation out of the estate as between solr. & client, & can be deprived of that right, which rests substantially upon contract, only if they have acted culpably or unreasonably. Plant*, No. 3127a, ante, that exors. who have established the validity of their will are entitled to their whole costs of the litigation, although they fail in establishing a codicil, does not extend in all cases to costs incurred by them by reason of their insisting upon probate not only of clauses in a will expressing the testamentary mind of their testator, but also of a clause which is found not to be his testamentary act. If a residuary gift is excluded from probate on the ground of want of capacity the question still arises whether the costs so incurred by the exors. are due to their "violation or culpable neglect of duty." If the ct. finds on this issue that an exor. is a wrongdoer, his prima facie right to receive out of the estate costs not otherwise provided for is displaced.—*THOMAS v. 5594a. Direction in will for payment of "money secured on mortgage" out of residue—Balance of unpaid purchase-money.]—Testator, who at the date of his will in 1912 was the owner of several freehold properties, one of which was subject to a mtge. & of leasehold & other personal estate, gave & bequeathed all the freehold & leasehold properties of which he might die possessed upon trusts in favour of certain of his grandchildren & great-grandchildren, & the residue of his estate upon trust for sale & conversion; he then directed that his trustees should out of the money thereby produced pay (inter alia) his debts & legacies, & should out of the residue of such money pay & discharge "any sum of money secured on mtge. of any of my freehold properties," & should stand possessed of the residue of such money in trust to divide same as therein mentioned. After the date of his will testator paid off the mtge. & took a reconveyance of the mortgaged property. Shortly before his death, in June & Oct. 1917, testator contracted to purchase certain freehold properties in respect of which he paid deposits, leaving balances of the purchase-money owing to the respective vendors. On Dec. 23, 1917, testator made a final codicil, by which, after revoking the appointment of one of his exors. & bequeathing a legacy, he confirmed his will in all other respects. Testator died on Dec. 26, 1917, without having completed the purchases or paid the balances of the purchase-money, & shortly after his death his exors. completed the purchases & paid the balances of the purchase-money; whereupon the question arose whether, as between the persons claiming under testator's will, those balances ought to be borne by the freehold properties of testator in respect of which same were payable, or ought to be satisfied out of his residuary estate:—Held: (1) inasmuch as a vendor's lien for unpaid purchase-money differs essentially from a mtge., even in the modern & wider sense of that term, upon the true construction of the will in the absence of any context enlarging the meaning of the term "mtge.," the balances of the unpaid purchase-money owing at testator's death were not "sums of money secured on mtge.," & no contrary intention was signified by the direction in the will to pay & discharge such sums out of testator's residuary estate, so as to exclude the operation of 1854 Act, which by virtue of 1867 Act, s. 2, extends to a vendor's lien for unpaid purchase-money; with the result that the balances in question ought to be borne by & satisfied out of the freehold properties in respect of which same were payable, & the devisees thereof were not entitled to have those balances discharged out of testator's residuary estate; (2) the confirmation of the will by the last codicil thereto, although executed after the mtge. on testator's freehold property had been paid off & after the vendor's lien had arisen, had not the effect of extending the meaning of the words "any sums of money secured on mtge. of any of my freehold & leasehold properties," so as to include the balances of unpaid purchase-money in question.—*Re BEIRNSTEIN, BARNETT v. The workmen removed nine guards for the purpose of setting the rollers, & having replaced only eight of the guards, started the rollers. Owing to their neglect, one workman, who slipped & fell, was dragged into the coupling gear & was killed. An information against resps. under 1901 Act, s. 136, for neglecting to observe the provision of sect. 10 (1) (c) that the mill-gearing must be securely fenced, was dismissed, on the grounds that resps. had taken all adequate precautions by providing the necessary guards, & that it was the fault of the workmen that caused the accident:—Held: under sect. 10 it was the duty of resps. not merely to provide guards, but to fence the machinery securely, & as they had not performed this duty, the justices ought to have convicted them.—THOMAS v. BOLTON (THOMAS) & SON, LTD. (1928), 139 L. T. 397; 92 J. P. 147; 44 T. L. R. 640; 26 L. G. R. 459, D. C.

- 76a. ——— Machinery equally safe fenced or unfenced—Overhead shaft.]—Resps. were the occupiers of a factory in which was a machine driven by a pulley fixed on a horizontal shaft, which formed part of the mill gearing. The driving belt slipped off the pulley & an employee of resps. attempted to put it back while the shaft was running & sustained injuries. The shaft & pulley were about thirteen feet from the floor & they were not fenced or guarded. In attempting to put on the belt the workman stood on a beam about seven feet from the floor, & was acting contrary to resps.' instructions. Resps. were summoned for not having the shaft fenced, but the justices, being of opinion that any fence would have been useless owing to the shaft being thirteen feet above the ground, dismissed the case:—Held: the finding of the justices was not equivalent to a finding that the shaft was "in such position or of such construction as to be equally safe to every person employed or working in the factory as it would be if it were securely fenced," which was the requirement of 1901 Act, s. 10 (1) (c), & there would have been no evidence to support the latter finding.—*ATKINSON v. employed or working in the factory as it would have been if it had been securely fenced:—Held: (1) the question whether a part of the machinery was "dangerous" within the Act was one of degree, & the risk involved in the use of the cutter did not reach a degree sufficient to justify that part being classified as "dangerous"; (2) in any event, to secure a conviction, facts must be established to support the second branch of the complaint, & on the facts, the charge was not proven.—*LAUDER v. - 264a. ———.]—Applt. was employed by resps. as a moulder of iron pipes upon piece work under an agreement by which applt. was to be paid 5½d. for a complete pipe free from defects, & other & smaller agreed prices for pipes defective in specified ways, e.g., 5½d. for a pipe that was bent. These agreed prices were fixed at the time of applt.'s employment. No notices containing the terms of the agreement were kept by resps. as required by Truck Act, 1896 (c. 44), & no particulars in writing were supplied to applt. as required by that Act:—Held: the agreement was a clear attempt to evade the above Act. The workman was employed to make pipes of full length & free from defects, & in paying the smaller prices for defective pipes resps. were making deductions "for or in respect of bad or negligent work or injury to the materials or other property of the employer."—PRITCHARD v. FERRIES.

Part I.—Definition and Nature of Ferries.

8. For the paragraph in the original volume substitute the following paragraph :—

.]—Defts., under a statute of 1791, built a toll-bridge in place of an ancient ferry on a public highway, & also approaches which by the Act were to be considered as part & parcel of the bridge. Pltfs., the county council, owned land adjoining one of the approaches & built a school on it. Defts. denied pltfs.' right to free access to the school over the approach :—Held : as the old highway consisted of the approaches to the ferry plus the passage across the river, & the substituted highway consisted of the approaches to the bridge plus the bridge, & as the old approaches were highways to which owners would be entitled to access, the substituted approaches were highways by which adjoining owners had similar rights of access, & defts.' claim was ill founded.—YORKSHIRE, EAST RIDING, COUNTY COUNCIL v. SELBY BRIDGE CO. OF PROPRIETORS, [1925] Ch. 841 ; 95 L. J. Ch. 86 ; 133 L. T. 628 ; 41 T. L. R. 602 ; 69 Sol. Jo. 775 ; 23 L. G. R. 547.

- 13a. ——— Persons able to cross on foot at low water.]—(1) Held : a franchise ferry between South Benfleet & Canvey Island had been granted to pltfs.' predecessors in title.

The alleged deficiency in fat was established, but it was also proved that the milk had not been tampered with in any way, the deficiency being due to the milk having stood for some time in the can, & to the sample having been drawn from a tap at the bottom after the cream had risen. No evidence was led as to the possibility or impossibility of redistributing the constituents of the milk in the can by stirring or otherwise:—Held: accused had failed to rebut the statutory presumption that the milk was not genuine, & the conviction was right.—*M'CALLUM v.  - 64a. ———.]—Pltf. backed a horse with debt. for £10 & the horse won the race. There was subsequently a dispute as to whether the result of the betting was payable at 100 to 1 or at 33 to 1. The parties agreed to refer the question to Tattersall's Committee. The Committee decided that the amount payable was £1,000, & that it was to be paid within seven days. In an action to recover the £1,000 pltf. alleged that debt. had agreed to abide by the decision of the Committee :—Held : as the parties only referred to Tattersall's Committee the question whether the bet was at 100 to 1 or at 33 to 1, & as there was no further agreement by debt. for good consideration to pay such sum as the Committee might find to be payable, the action failed.—*HYDE v. 252 i. ———.]—Prizes provided out of admission money.—A person hired a hall for one night, & another hall for two nights, & advertised that whist drives, open to the public on payment of one shilling for admission, would be held in the halls on those nights. A large number of people attended, & prizes were awarded to the successful players. The purchase of the prizes was defrayed out of the admission money, any balance over being retained by the promoter:—Held: (1) the playing of progressive whist was gaming, in view of the facts that the element of chance predominated in the game, & that the prizes were derived from the admission money, & it was immaterial whether the proceedings were or were not detrimental to the morals of the community; (2) accused had managed, conducted, or carried on gaming in the premises, although his operations had been restricted to three isolated occasions.—*BUNTON v. 415a. ———.]—Appls. were the responsible proprietors of a four-page weekly newspaper, which was sold at 6d. a copy, & which had in winter a weekly circulation of over 32,000 copies. The newspaper contained what was called a "Free Football Competition" with a coupon giving particulars of future football matches & a column for the competitors to fill in their forecast of the results, a prize of £150 being offered for a correct forecast of all the results & a prize of £100 for a correct forecast of nine results, but no money was to be sent with the coupons. Appls. were summoned for unlawfully publishing a coupon of a ready-money football betting business contrary to sect. 1 of the above Act. The justices found that the majority of the persons who bought the newspaper did so for the sake of the coupon, & that appls. had circulated coupons of a ready-money football betting business, & they convicted appls.:—Held: the case was typical of the mischief aimed at by the Act, & the justices' decision must be affirmed.—SUTTLE v. 415 i. "Printing or knowingly circulating coupons"—Construction of Football Betting Act, 1920 (c. 52), ss. 1, 2.]—Commission agents issued a printed publication containing coupons for use in predicting results of football matches & offering money prizes. Apart from the coupons & matters connected therewith the paper contained very little reading matter, & the majority of purchasers bought it for the sake of the coupons. The commission agents were convicted of knowingly printing & circulating circulars or coupons of a ready-money football betting business:—Held: the paper was a circular or coupon of the business of appls., & conviction sustained.—JAMESON v. SINCLAIR, [1925] S. C. (J.) 1.—SCOT.

sn. "Ready-money football betting business"—Newsagents settling with publishers monthly.]—Commission agents issued a printed publication containing coupons for use in predicting results of football matches & offering money prizes. It was issued to wholesale newsagents, & distributed by them to retail newsagents, who sold it to the public. The wholesale & retail newsagents settled their accounts weekly; the wholesale newsagents ran monthly accounts with the commission agents, who paid the prizewinners. The prize money was paid, although the monthly accounts had not been settled:—Held: there was evidence on which the magistrates might hold that appls.' business was a ready-money football betting business.—JAMESON v. SINCLAIR, [1925] S. C. (J.) 1.—SCOT.

Applt. was convicted, & appealed to quarter sessions, who allowed the appeal, on the ground that the conviction was bad on the face of it because it did not specify what contravention of Betting Act, 1853 (c. 119), was alleged:—Held: applt. was entitled to the precise information to which he would have been entitled if he had been prosecuted under Betting Act, 1853 (c. 119), & the decision of quarter sessions was right.—*POINTON v. 1223a. Charge by several persons of properties—Release of deeds deposited by one.—By a joint & several memorandum of charge twelve persons, including six resps., deposited deeds with applt. as security to relieve applt. from the entire burden of a guarantee given by him to a bank for the overdraft of S. & Co., & they thereby respectively charged the hereditaments to which the deeds related with repayment of all money to become due from S. & Co. Applt., at the request of C., one of the twelve persons, allowed her to take the deeds deposited by her away for the purpose of raising a loan. S. & Co. having gone into liquidation, the bank called upon applt. to make good his guarantee. Thereupon resps. brought an action claiming that they were entitled to have all the deeds deposited by them under the terms of the charge discharged from the debt to which they were made liable to contribute under the charge, on the ground that, by applt. allowing C. to withdraw the deeds deposited by her, their risk had been increased:—Held: (1) there had been an alteration made in the position of those whose properties remained deposited as securities under the charge by reason of applt. allowing the withdrawal by C. of the deeds deposited by her,

& they not having consented to the alteration, their properties, the deeds of which they had deposited, were discharged from all claims under the charge; their right of marshalling had been affected by the withdrawal of the deeds of one of the parties, & the materiality of the alteration was a question to be decided by them; (2) the same reasoning was applicable, whether what was contributed were securities or personal liability.—SMITH v. WOOD (1928), 139 L. T. 250; 72 Sol. Jo. 517, C. A.

1224a. Guarantee of call on shares—Forfeiture of shares—Discharge of surety.—The forfeiture by a co. of the shares of a principal debtor constitutes an interference with the rights of a surety who has guaranteed payment of instalments owing upon such shares, in that it substitutes a fresh & more onerous liability upon the surety than the liability under the original contract, & deprives him of his equitable right of lien upon the shares. A surety is, therefore, discharged by such forfeiture from his contract of suretyship.—Re DARWEN & PEARCE, [1927] 1 Ch. 176; 95 L. J. Ch. 487; 136 L. T. 124; 70 Sol. Jo. 965; [1926] B. & C. R. 65.

If there is, in fact, in the possession of the creditor such a counter-security, it is the duty of the creditor, whether its existence is known to the surety or not, to exercise reasonable care in maintaining it for the benefit of the surety, so as to be available, unimpaired by reason of any negligence, 322a. User by sufferance.—Deft. council claimed that there was a public footpath over pltf.'s park. On a plan attached to an inclosure award of 1816 no such public footpath was set out, & since that time down to 1901 the park had been in settlement with no one capable of dedicating a right of way to the public. The alleged footpath led from the public road over part of the carriage drive to the hall, & then turned off through the park, leading to only three farms & three or four cottages, & by its use a distance of about sixty-four yards was saved. There was no evidence of dedication, & the evidence of user was by the occupants of the farms & cottages & their friends:—Held: the proof of uninterrupted user was no more than evidence from which the ct. could infer that at some time the owner of the soil had dedicated the path to the public of which there was no evidence, & the evidence of user was user by sufferance only since 1816, before which no such public footpath was shown to exist.—*FENWICK v. The vendor's covenant being qualified, the question turned upon whether there had been dedication of the right subsequently to 1782, the date of the last purchase for value by those through whom the vendor claimed. Pltf. produced two tithe maps, made respectively in 1802 & 1840, in neither of which was the right of way marked:—Held: the tithe maps were made for a special purpose, & not for the purpose of showing public or private rights other

786a. — Increased burden of traffic.]

A road was constructed by pltf. corp. under powers conferred by a private Act of 1875, which enacted that the road should be constructed according to a certain specification & that it should thereafter be maintained at pltf.'s expense. The road was completed in 1878 as a waterbound macadamised road in accordance with the statutory requirements, & was fully maintained by them for many years, but ultimately it deteriorated owing to the increase of traffic of a kind unknown in 1878, & unless resort was had to tar-spraying, or to some similar modern expedient, the existing traffic would rapidly destroy the road:—Held: (1) pltf. were liable to maintain the road in the condition in which it was completed in 1878, & that liability still continued, notwithstanding the change of circumstances brought about by the increase of traffic; (2) the obligation to maintain the road rested on pltf. alone.—MANCHESTER CORPN. v. AUDENSHAW URBAN COUNCIL & DENTON URBAN COUNCIL, [1928] Ch. 763; 97 L. J. Ch. 276; 139 L. T. 509; 92 J. P. 163; 44 T. L. R. 628; 72 Sol. Jo. 452; 26 L. G. R. 343, C. A.

1002a. Walls & roof of tunnel.]—In 1823 a road was constructed as a private road by S., on, through, & under his own land. In order to make the road S. tunnelled under an existing footpath. In 1923 the road became a main road, pl'tfs., S.'s successors in title to the soil through which the tunnel was driven, being the road authority. In 1924 it became necessary to repair the walls & roof of the tunnel:—Held: (1) the walls & roof of the tunnel either formed part of the highway or were necessary for its maintenance, & the costs of their repair were costs within Local Govt. Act, 1888 (c. 41), s. 11 (2), towards which defts. were bound to make an annual payment; (2) even if S., having in 1823 tunnelled under an existing highway, became liable ratione nocumenti to repair the part of the tunnelled road under the highway, that liability did not descend to pltfs. under Local Govt. Act, 1888, s. 97, because pltfs. were not only S.'s successors in title but also a highway authority.—REIGATE CORPN. v. SURREY COUNTY COUNCIL, [1928] Ch. 359; 97 L. J. Ch. 168; 138 L. T. 691; 92 J. 1146a. Removal of footway.]—A municipal corpn. in exercise of its powers as highway authority under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 149, widened a narrow street in the town by entirely removing a raised & kerbed footway on one side, & throwing its site into the carriage-way without any notice to or consent of the owner of the adjoining house & premises, who was also owner of one-half of the soil of the road. The owner brought an action in the county ct. for a mandatory order to restore the footway, & for damages for injury to his property. It was proved that the access to & egress from the property through doors in a garden wall was rendered inconvenient & dangerous by the removal of the footway, & the county ct. judge granted a mandatory injunction to defts. to restore the footway to a width of 1 ft. less than before:—Held: the county ct. judge had rightly directed himself in law, & there was evidence upon which he was entitled to find that the action of defts. in removing the footway was unreasonable & arbitrary, & it was not sufficient for the action to be bond side; & the order was properly made.—HOWARD-FLANDERS v. MALDON CORPN. (1926), 135 L. T. 6; 90 J. P. 97; 70 Sol. Jo. 544; 24 L. G. R. 224, C. A.

— Obstruction during construction of new road.]—A corpn., in making a new road connecting two existing roads in the same straight line with a bridge across a ravine dividing them, pulled down an old wall which closed a cul de sac in which one of the roads terminated, partly constructed the new road & erected a wooden fence at the end, beyond which was the ravine. Pltf. drove his car after dark down a public road leading straight into the new road under construction, & not seeing the fence in time, which had no red lamp or other warning of danger upon it, &

condition. Pltf.'s injury was not attributable to any lack of care on her part. — Trench dug in unfinished road.—Defts. in execution of a housing scheme were laying out a new road running eastwards from a certain highway & closed at its eastern end by a quickset hedge. Footpaths had already been laid out & edged with kerbstones; houses were being built on the northern side & heaps of earth & building materials made the footpath on this side impassable; the footpath on the south side was still unfinished, but was traversable; it was bounded by a fence of wooden posts & bars; the middle of the road was levelled but not metalled; across it, for laying an electric cable, defts. had cut a trench which they left unfenced & by night unlighted. They did not prevent persons, whether intending occupiers of houses or others, from walking down the new road. Pltf. on a

Sept. evening, while there was still daylight, walked with a companion down the highway & into the new road along the southern footpath. Through a gap in the fence they went across other land occupied by defts. to a golf course. They returned somewhat hurriedly when it was growing dark, & pltf. fell into the trench & was injured:—Held: the trench being apparent to all, there was nothing in the nature of a concealed danger or trap, & defts. were not liable to pltf., who was a mere licensee.—*COLESHILL v. sd. Street railway track adjacent to highway.—Pltf. in a motor car attempted to cross the tracks of a street railway, which were at that point not laid upon the travelled highway but upon land owned by the city corpn. adjacent to the travelled highway. The place of crossing was in a dangerous condition, by reason of the tracks not being ballasted but simply resting upon exposed sleepers. The car was imprisoned there & run into by a street car, & pltf. were injured & the car damaged:—Held: the city corpn. were liable since, although no obligation to repair existed, there was a trap or concealed danger.—*JAMES v. It was also established that defenders had not failed in their duty with respect either to the construction & condition of the lamp, or to the precautions taken to ensure that it should remain alight during the hours of darkness:—Held: the standard of performance could not be absolute, but must be relative to the best available means of achieving exact performance, & in the absence of evidence of any failure on the part of defenders to take every reasonable means of carrying out their statutory obligations, they fell to be absolved.—

Originally the top of the fireplug had been level with the pavement, but in consequence of the ordinary wearing away of the footpath the fireplug projected half an inch above the level of the pavement. The fireplug itself was in perfect repair. 1372a. Liability of water company.]—A water co., at the request & expense of the owner of a house, laid down a service pipe leading from their main under the street into the house, in which they placed a stop-cock for the purpose of regulating the supply of water. This stop-cock was protected by a cover or guard-box let into the pavement, which was provided with a lid or flap. Owing to the hinge of the lid or flap being out of repair, it projected above the pavement, & pltf. while passing along the street tripped over it & sustained injury. The apparatus could not be repaired without being removed, or removed without breaking up the pavement. The jury found that there was negligence on the part of those who were liable for the repair of the hinge:—Held: the co., who alone had power to break up the street for the purpose of repairing the guard-box, were responsible for its repair, & liable in respect of the injuries sustained by pltf.—CHAPMAN v. The amount not having been paid, the council on Jan. 1, 1926, applied to a magistrate under sect. 116 (1) of the above Act of 1894 to fix the amount of the expenses & to make an order that no part of the structure should be let for occupation until after payment thereof. The magistrate dismissed the complaint on the ground that more than the period of six months limited by sect. 11 of the above Act of 1848 had elapsed between the time when the matter of the complaint arose & the date when the complaint was made:—Held: the six months' limitation of time applied to proceedings under sect. 116 (1) of the Act of 1894, & the time ran from the date of the demand, & the magistrate's decision must be affirmed.—LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. - 2229a. Part of premises fronting another street.]—Deft. in 1903 purchased a house which fronted on G. road. In 1907 she bought a strip of land which she used to form a carriage drive to the house. In 1904 her husband became the tenant of a field to the south of & adjoining the house & land. The field fronted on E. road. In 1907 deft. purchased the field, but entered into a tenancy agreement letting it to her husband, & from that time the field & the house & land had been separately assessed by the local authority though in fact the tenancy agreement between deft. & her husband ceased to exist about 1918. In 1920 E. road was made up, the usual course being followed under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), ss. 150 & 257, with the result that pl'tfs. claimed a charge, for the admitted proportion due from deft. of the expenses incurred in making up E. road, on the whole of deft.'s property, including her house & grounds as well as the field, as fronting, adjoining or abutting on E. road—Held: the house & grounds & the field must be considered as being one close, & as such the whole was liable to a charge for making up E. road as fronting, adjoining or abutting thereon.—ALTRINCHAM URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. (Consolidation) Act, 1883, ss. 46–50, which were substantially identical with Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57). The corp'n. duly complied with the formalities required & made a provisional apportionment on resps., the frontagers on the street, according to their respective frontages. Resps. objected that the works were unnecessary. On the hearing of this objection resps. called no evidence. The stipendiary magistrate held that some works were necessary, but was of opinion that the estimated expenses were too heavy. He reduced the estimate & ordered that one resp. should pay one-half & each other resp. two-thirds of the respective sums named in the provisional apportionment :—Held : inasmuch as the corp'n. had not resolved that the apportionment should be on any basis other than frontage, the stipendiary magistrate could not direct an apportionment on any other basis. Subject to that limitation, he must consider & determine, upon evidence, whether the proposed works were in any, & what, respect unnecessary, & must have regard to any alternative proposals, if resps. made any & supported them by evidence, & to the cost thereof.—*BIRMINGHAM CORPN. v. 1226a. ——— If living at his death—Cash value of policy sought to be taken by insured during life.—A husband took out an insurance policy for £500 on his life, & by the terms of the policy the co. agreed to pay that sum to insured's wife, if she were living at his death, or in the event of her prior death to pay it to insured's exors., administrators & assigns. The policy contained a proviso that, if at the end of twenty years insured was still living, he should have the right to exercise any of six specified options. Insured being then still living, he exercised an option to receive the entire cash value of the policy with its share of accumulated profits & to discontinue the policy. A sum of £288 thus became payable. The co. were unwilling to pay over this sum except on the joint receipt of the husband & wife, & ultimately paid it into ct.:—Held: (1) the policy came within sect. 11 of the above Act, & created a trust in favour of the wife in certain events; (2) insured must be taken to have exercised the option for the benefit of the trust; (3) unless the husband & wife came to an agreement, the fund must be accumulated in ct. until it could be ascertained by the death of either party who was entitled to it.—Re FLEETWOOD'S POLICY, [1926] Ch. 48; 95 L. ni. ——— Bankruptcy of husband.—S. effected an insurance on his own life in favour of his wife under Married Women's Policies of Assurance (Scotland) Act, 1880. S.'s estates were afterwards sequestrated:—Held: the policy vested in bkpt. as trustee for his wife, & it formed no part of his estate & was not liable to the diligence of his creditors.—STEWART v. HODGE (1901), 8 S. L. T. 436.—SCOT.

nii. ——— Whether assignable.—A policy of assurance was effected by a husband for the benefit of his wife under Married Women's Policies of Assurance (Scotland) Act, 1880. There was competition between the widow & an assignee claiming under an assignation which bore to have been executed with the consent & concurrence of the wife:—Held: the wife had no power to discharge the trust in her favour created by the policy, & the insurance co. ought to have known that the deed was one which the spouses were disabled from granting.—SCOTTISH LIFE CO. v. DONALD (1901), 9 S. L. T. 200.—SCOT.

The conveyance was dated Apr. 9, 1920, & was not registered until the following Dec. Until registration the deed had not been delivered, & deit. had been told nothing about it:—Held: though the presumption of advancement may be rebutted by evidence of actual intention, there was cogent evidence of pltf. having ultimately made up his mind that his wife should have the property.—HARRINGTON v. HARRINGTON, [1925] 2 D. L. R. 849; 56 O. L. R. 568.—CAN.

sk. Grain & stock on land conveyed to wife.—A husband conveyed to his wife half of a quarter section of land. Husband & wife lived together on, & farmed, the quarter section, & the husband worked on the farm after the transfer in the same way as before:—Held: the husband was the owner of grain grown on, & animals situate on, the quarter section.—NATIONAL TRUST CO. v. HOLOWAYCHUK, [1925] 3 W. W. R. 382.—CAN.

sm. Purchase in husband's name—Subsequent transfer to wife—Failure of consideration.—Husband & wife purchased a house in Oct. 1920. The house was in pltf.'s name until Jan. 1922, when it was transferred to the wife. In Jan. 1924, the husband was ejected from the house, & he brought action against the wife for a declaration that his wife held the house as trustee for him. On the trial the husband stated that when he made the conveyance to his wife he did so on her undertaking that the members of her family would vacate the house, & this was never carried out:—Held: pltf. could not succeed, as the only claim he could set up would be that he had made a conveyance for a consideration that had failed, & his action would be either for specific performance or damages.—BODY v. petitioner why she prayed for judicial separation & not dissolution of the marriage. Petitioner stated that she did not wish her husband to marry the woman who had ruined her home:—Held: permanent maintenance & custody being, at any rate, a part of the purpose for which the suit was brought, petitioner had a right to a decree of judicial separation. The ct. had a discretion to refuse such a decree, but not an unlimited discretion, & that discretion must be exercised upon some legal ground, such as the absolute & discretionary bars & the ground that the suit was not brought bond fide, but only for some collateral purpose. It was not such a legal ground that the ct. thought it would be better that the relief to be granted should be dissolution, & not judicial separation.—BLANCHARD v. BLANCHARD (1928), 138 L. 3092a. — Agreement between husband & co-respondent as to damages.]—Petitioner filed a petition for divorce on the ground of his wife's adultery with co-resp., & it was disclosed to the ct. that petitioner & co-resp. had agreed that co-resp. should pay petitioner £2,500 damages, of which £1,750 was to be paid down, & the rest later, & that petitioner should claim no further damages from co-resp. & should put no obstacles in the way of a decree nisi being made absolute. The petition was dismissed on the ground that the suit was collusive. After the dismissal resp. & co-resp. continued to live in adultery, & petitioner, who had received the £1,750, presented a second petition against them, complaining of the adultery since the date of the former petition:—Held: petitioner had by the agreement prevented himself from complaining of any adultery whether past or future, & he had connived at the adultery of which in his second petition he complained, & the second petition must be dismissed.—*GIFFORD v. 4370a. Corroboration—Necessity for—Charges of grave sexual offences.]—(1) Where in a matrimonial cause one spouse accuses the other of very grave sexual offences the accusation, as in criminal cases, ought not, without due & cautious consideration, to be held to be proved by the mere oath of one party against the oath of the other, particularly when the accuser has been an accomplice in the offences. Where the decision in such a case depends upon the verdict of of jury, it is the duty of the judge to caution the jury to this effect; but the ct. will not reverse a finding of the jury that such an offence has been committed on the ground that they acted on the evidence of one party alone, or that that party was an accomplice, provided that the judge has given to the jury a proper warning as to the acceptance of such testimony without corroboration.

(2) The rule that to constitute legal cruelty there must be danger, or a reasonable apprehension of danger, to life, limb, or health, applies to cruelty which consists in making a wife submit to improper sexual acts, as well as to cruelty of a more usual kind, such as violence, ill-temper, etc.—*STATHAM v. 5360a. On lunacy of husband.]—The jurisdiction in lunacy to appoint a receiver of the estate of a person of unsound mind does not exclude other cts. from enforcing lawful claims against his estate, including claims arising in the Divorce Div. Although the primary duty of those concerned with the care of a person of unsound mind is to apply his estate for his maintenance, & there is power under Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 171, to direct a settlement of the property of a lunatic or defective, the Divorce Div. is not thereby discharged from the duty of providing for the permanent maintenance of a petitioning wife out of the estate of a husband of unsound mind. When by an order in lunacy a provision has been directed for the wife during the lifetime of the husband & pending his incapacity, & the Divorce Div. approve the quantum of the order, the proper course, on application in that Div. by the wife for permanent maintenance, is to order it to be secured to her at the rate ordered in lunacy so far as the husband's means permit & without prejudice to any further order in lunacy, the security not to be enforceable pending subsistence of the order in lunacy, & should it subsist during the life of the husband not to be enforceable till his death.—*C. 5360 i. On dissolution of marriage—For guilt of wife.—Divorce & Matrimonial Causes Act, 1903, s. 42, does not authorise the ct., where a decree for dissolution of marriage has been obtained by a husband against a wife, to make an order on the husband for the permanent maintenance of the wife.—HARRIS v. HARRIS, [1926] N. Z. L. R.

(c. 49), s. 190 (1) & (2). Where the husband's whole income has been expended on the requirements of the matrimonial home, a third of his means may well be required for the wife's maintenance; but where, beyond everything called for by such requirements, the husband possesses an ample fortune, the amount of his income affords no definite guidance as to the sum required to supply his sometime wife with the necessities, comforts, & advantages incidental to her station in life.

Where the husband's gross income was £25,337 a year, derived mainly from his interest in a business concern, the registrar by his report submitted that the husband should be ordered to secure to his wife, who had divorced him, by way of permanent maintenance for her life, the annual sum of £3,500 less tax, & to pay to his wife during their joint lives the further annual sum of £500 less tax. The ct. confirmed the report.—GILBEY v. GILBEY, [1927] P. 197; 96 L. J. P. 55; 137 L. T. 31; 43 T. L. R. 283.

5382b. ———.]—Resp., a husband, who had been divorced, re-married, & by an antenuptial settlement settled property, which included the matrimonial home & the chattels therein & the major part of his capital, on his wife in futuro. Petitioner, his former wife, had obtained an order for permanent maintenance of £400 a year & of £100 for her son, when resp.'s annual income was about £1,500. Subsequently, when resp.'s income, not taking into account the settlement, was about £4,500, petitioner applied for an increase in the amount of the order, on the ground that resp.'s means had increased. The registrar increased the order for permanent maintenance from £400 to £1,200 a year, less income tax, & from £100 to £150 a year, free of income tax, for the son:—Held: (1) resp.'s means had increased, as by sharing the advantages of the matrimonial home as of right settled upon his wife, a larger portion of the £1,500 unsettled income was left free to be dealt with by him & by the ct.; (2) the order could not be made disregarding the settlement, which subsisted; (3) an order for permanent maintenance, or an increase of it, should not be based on the income of the husband during a year of exceptional prosperity; (4) an order for permanent maintenance in such a case should not be based on the old practice of the Ecclesiastical Cts. in the case of a decree a mensâ et thoro, of granting to the wife one-third of the husband's available means, as the conditions arising from the two decrees were not the same, petitioner & resp. being divorced, & free to marry again; (5) in view of the increased means of the husband, having regard to the wife's fortune, the ability of the husband & the conduct of the parties, the order for permanent maintenance for the former wife should be increased from £400

a year to £750 a year, less income tax.—

That jurisdiction can be invoked against a person not domiciled in England, & in respect of property beyond the jurisdiction, only subject to the principle that English cts. will not infringe the authority of foreign tribunals in their domestic affairs, or adjudicate with regard to property when their judgment will be ineffective. Apart from jurisdiction over property, the exercise of jurisdiction in personam in such a case depends upon the question whether the party to be affected by it is within the reach of the compulsory process of the ct.

6233a. — Made in Dominion—Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920 (c. 33).]—A married woman obtained in a police ct. in Australia a maintenance order against her husband ordering him to pay £5 10s. per week for her & her child's maintenance. An application was subsequently made by her to a ct. of summary jurisdiction in England under the above Act to confirm that order as against her husband who was resident in England. Upon that application no evidence was submitted to the justices on behalf of the husband. The justices confirmed the order with the modification or variation of substituting £2 10s. per week, i.e., £2 for the married woman & 10s. for the child, in lieu of £5 10s. per week, they being of opinion that they were bound to reduce the amount payable under the order to the limit prescribed for such orders made by a ct. of summary jurisdiction under Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895 (c. 39):—Held: (1) the justices had power to state a case for the opinion of the K. B. Div. on the question whether they were right in so deciding; (2) they were wrong in holding that in dealing with an order under the above Act of 1920 they were bound to limit the amount payable to the sum prescribed for orders made under the above Act of 1895.

Subsequently the husband took out a summons asking that the order for maintenance should be discharged, on the ground that the wife had committed adultery. The husband gave evidence that, since the date of the maintenance order, his wife had given birth to a child, & of non-access on his part. This was the only evidence of adultery. The justices found that the wife had committed adultery, & discharged the weekly order for maintenance:—Held: (1) the evidence of the husband of non-access to bastardise his child was not admissible, & the justices' order discharging the maintenance order must be set aside; (2) in proceedings under Summary

Jurisdiction (Separation & Maintenance) Acts, 1895 to 1925, if there is a charge of adultery, the act or acts of adultery should be specified with particulars, if possible, of the place where, the time when, & the name of the person with whom it is alleged the adultery has been committed.—*BOSTON v. had to expend considerable sums yearly on feeding stuffs. The produce grown on the land represented only about thirty per cent. of the food required for the cows. Resp. sold his milk to regular customers in the district, & only purchased milk for resale when his own supply was insufficient for his customers’ ordinary requirements. He sold his cows when they became dry. The general comrs. held that resp. was not a dealer in milk, & they discharged an assessment made

On Mar. 17, 1921, the £20,000 was paid to the co., & in anticipation of the marble being purchased in Italy, though not till the autumn of 1921, the co. at once arranged for the conversion of the greater part of the £20,000 into lire at one hundred & three to the £, & a lira account was opened. In May, 1921, the lira had appreciated in value, & as the money was not yet required by the co., their nominee, without the co.'s knowledge or authority, directed the sale of the balance of the lira account, & at seventy-two to the £ the lire realised a profit of £6,707, which was received by the co. The lire were subsequently repurchased for the purposes of the contract for £19,386, which was allowed as a deduction from the co.'s profits for income tax purposes:—Held: in computing the co.'s profits for the purposes of assessment to income tax for the year 1922–23 the £6,707 was not a profit arising out of the contract for the supply of marble, but was merely an appreciation of a temporary investment, & was not assessable to income tax as part of the profits of the co.'s trade.—*MCKINLAY v. In the books of the co. each shareholder was credited with his proportion of the bonus in payment of 10s. in respect of each of the shares so allotted & issued to him:—Held: the proportion of the bonus so credited to each shareholder was "profits or bonus credited" to him within Income Tax Assessment Act, 1915–1921, s. 14 (b), & was properly included in his income.—*JAMES v. He was in England on leave from June to Sept. 1918, & during that time the co., at his request, placed to the credit of his banking account in England £525, being an advance on account of salary falling due before Apr. 5, 1919, & an assessment to income tax was made upon him for the year 1918–19 in respect of this sum under Schedule D., Case V. His wife had been for several years, & was throughout the year 1918–19, the owner of a house in Kent, towards the upkeep of which he contributed out of other income arising in England, but since Sept. 1917, she had been mainly living with him in Demerara, the house being left unoccupied. During his stay in England in 1918, applt. lived for the most part in hotels & in fact spent only one night at the house. The Special Comrs. having decided that applt. was resident in the United Kingdom during the year ending Apr. 5, 1919, & that he had been rightly assessed to income tax in respect of the above sum as having been received in the United Kingdom during that year from an employment abroad:—Held: inasmuch as applt.'s salary was payable in Demerara, the sum credited to him in the United Kingdom must be regarded as remitted to him from abroad & as constituting income from a foreign possession chargeable under Schedule D., Case V.—FLEMING v. sp. General rule.]—A partnership resides, for purposes of income tax, at the place where its real business is carried on; & the real business is carried on where the central management & control of the whole of its business actually abides. There may be two such places of residence, but the suggested second residence must not merely have a delegation of the management of some portion of the partnership business, however extensive, but a delegation of some portion of the management of the business as a whole. The question as to where the individual partners actually have their places of residence is a wholly irrelevant consideration in determining the place of residence of the firm.—MADRAS INCOME TAX COMR. v. Schedules B. & D.—A farmer bred horses & cattle on a considerable scale. He used his stallions for his own horse-breeding purposes, & also earned fees by sending them on journeys for the service of other owners’ mares. In this connection he kept a reserve of stallions to replace any which might become incapacitated. All his stallions, of which only a small proportion earned fees, formed part of one undivided stud. He was assessed to income tax, on the profits of his general farming business under Schedule B., & on the profits of his fee-earning stallions under Schedule D. As a method of fixing the amount of profits assessable under the latter Schedule, the comrs. determined to regard a certain number of stallions as exclusively used in earning fees, & to allow the deduction of the cost of their full upkeep & attendance, & to provide for replacements by allowing a similar deduction in respect of other stallions in the stud to the extent of one-third of the number of travelling stallions. The farmer contended that his stallion-owning business should be treated as entirely separate from his farming business, & that the whole of the expenses & losses connected with his stallions should be set against the revenue derived from them:—Held: it was primarily a question for the comrs. to determine, & no cause had been shown for disturbing their determination.—*MARSHALL v. - 307a. Accident Insurance—Mutual society.—A mutual insurance assocn. was formed, its sole activity being the indemnity of its members, who were coal-owners, against liability for compensation in respect of fatal accidents to workmen. The members of the assocn. were the persons protected by it, every member being liable to contribute a sum not exceeding £25 in the event of a winding up. The assocn. formed a general fund by making calls upon members proportionate to the wages paid in their works for the time being, & the balance of the ordinary call fund was transferred to a reserve fund, into which any extraordinary calls were also paid. A member, on retirement, was entitled to get back in cash a proportion of his share in the above reserve fund, but, apart from this, members had no right at all to the cash in the reserve fund, though the interest accruing on the reserve fund could be used in diminution of members' calls:—Held: (1) the sums paid by the members to the assocn. were admissible deductions in computing the profits made by a member for the purpose of assessment to income tax, as the money was laid out by the respective members on a true insurance principle; (2) the surplus funds of the assocn. were not assessable to income tax, as the assocn. was mere machinery for the purpose of enabling subscribing members to insure themselves.—*THOMAS v. - 307b. Marine insurance company—Building ships—Cancellation of shipbuilding contracts.—A marine insurance co., having entered into contracts for the building of four ships, accepted delivery of two of the ships & then, owing to a slump in the shipping trade, cancelled the contracts for the other two ships on payment of £70,000. It was contended that a new business of dealing in ships had been begun by the co., & that the £70,000 was a proper deduction in arriving at its profits:—Held: the co. was not carrying on any trade, from the profits of which the £70,000 was an admissible deduction.—DEVON MUTUAL STEAMSHIP INSURANCE ASSOCN. v. OGG (1927), 13 Tax Cas. 184.

- 309a. Loss on investments—What amounts to.—Appls., an insurance co., had investments in British railway stocks, & it was admitted by the Crown that any loss suffered by applts. on such investments was deductible from their profits for purposes of income tax. The result of Railways Act, 1921 (c. 55), was that applts. received in exchange for their various railway holdings stocks in the four amalgamated railway cos. created by that Act. The market value of these new stocks was less than the original cost to applts. of the old stocks, & they claimed that the loss so occasioned to them should be allowed as a deduction from their profits for 1922 & 1923 in computing their income tax liability:—Held: as the effect of what had happened was that the old investments had been closed & realised, & new investments had been begun, applts. were entitled to the deduction claimed.—ROYAL INSURANCE CO., LTD. v. STEPHEN (1928), 44 T. L. R. 630.

By agreement between himself, his co-trustees & the beneficiaries, his remuneration was calculated as a percentage of the annual income of the trust funds, which income had already been brought into charge to tax:—Held: this remuneration was chargeable to income tax against the solr. under 1918 Act, Schedule D., Case II., as his profits or earnings arising from an employment, & was not constituted of annual payments payable wholly out of profits or gains brought into charge to tax within Rules applicable to all Schedules, r. 19.—*JONES v. Act, 1899 (c. 14), to secure money advanced by the London County Council. The money so raised was used by resps. in connection with the construction of flats for the working classes in pursuance of a scheme prepared by them under Housing, Town Planning, etc., Act, 1919 (c. 35), s. 1. In making payments of interest on the sums advanced resps. deducted income tax under Rules applicable to all Schedules, r. 21. The interest was paid out of the general fund in the hands of resps., into which fund were paid all profits or gains, whether derived from a housing scheme or from elsewhere. Resps. had only one banking account, out of which all payments, including the interest, were made & into which all receipts, including the profits & gains derived from resps.' electricity undertaking, or otherwise, were paid. No special fund in respect of any housing scheme was maintained. Resps. possessed profits or gains brought into charge to income tax sufficient for the payment of interest on the sums advanced, apart from any revenue derived under any housing scheme:—Held: as none of resps.' profits & gains other than the receipts of the housing scheme contributed to the payment of the interest, & as resps. had an indemnity against loss on the scheme, resps. were liable to account for the amount of the deductions.—DICKSON v. HAMPSTEAD BOROUGH COUNCIL (1927), 91 J. P. 146; 43 T. L. R. 595; 25 L. G. R. 402; 11 Tax Cas. 691.

- 394a. ———.]—The profits of the Metropolitan Water Board were assessable under 1918 Act, Schedule A., No. III., r. 3, by reference to the profits of the year preceding the year of assessment. The accounts of the Board for the year ending Mar. 31, 1922, showed a loss, & no assessment was made for the year ending Apr. 5, 1923. The accounts for the year ending Mar. 31, 1923, showed a profit of over two millions, out of which the Board paid over one million interest on water stock, & debentures, deducting & retaining the income tax thereon. On an information claiming that the Board was liable to account for the amount of the tax so deducted, the Board contended that the interest paid for the year 1922–23 was payable out of profits brought into charge for 1922–23 within Rules applicable to all Schedules, r. 19, & was in fact paid out of the profits for 1922–23, & that, although the income tax for 1922–23 was to be measured by the profits of the preceding year, the profits for 1922–23 had been brought into charge, & rule 21 did not apply:—Held: as the Board had been assessed at zero under Schedule A for 1922–23, the interest had not been paid out of profits brought into charge, & the Crown was entitled to succeed.—*A.-G. v. - 430b. — Company making investments on real estate abroad.—A co. incorporated in the United Kingdom, & carrying on business there at its head office in the making of loans of money upon the security of land in Egypt, was assessed to income tax until Apr. 1, 1922, under Schedule D., Case I., upon the profits of the co.'s business. As from Apr. 1, 1922, the entire control of the business was removed to Egypt. The trade of the co. wholly consisted of the lending of money to approved borrowers in Egypt in accordance with Egyptian law, at rates of interest varying from 6 to 8½ per cent. No loans were entertained without good real security being given, & in the event of the borrower's default, proceedings were invariably taken in the local cts. to realise the security, & if it could not be sold immediately, the co. would go into possession:—Held: as from Apr. 1, 1922, the co., though it carried on a trade or business, was properly assessed to income tax under Schedule D., Case IV., in respect of income arising from securities in a place out of the United Kingdom, & was to be taxed in the full amount of such income, whether it was remitted to the United Kingdom or not. There was no evidence upon which the comrs. could find, as they had, that the taking of securities for the loans advanced was only “an incident” in such business; on the contrary it was an indispensable condition of the business. The case being one coming both under Case IV. & Case V. the Crown had an option to tax the co. under either case.—BUTLER v. MORTGAGE CO. OF EGYPT, LTD. (1928), 139 L. T. 29, C. A.

The trustees, who had full power over the investment of the trust fund, were a co. constituted under the law of the State of New York & resident therein. The trust fund consisted of foreign govt. securities, foreign stocks & shares, & other foreign property. The trustees paid over such of the sums they received as they considered to be income, after deducting expenses, to the order of the daughter at a bank in New York. No part of the income was remitted to the United Kingdom. Resp., the husband of testator's daughter & resident in the United Kingdom, was assessed under Schedule D., Case IV., in the full amount of the income of the trust:—Held: (1) the daughter was specifically entitled under the will in equity during her life to the interest & dividends of the securities, stocks, & shares comprised in the trust fund, & her husband was assessable under Case IV., r. 1, & Case V., r. 1, to income tax in respect thereof, except such, if any, as were shown to be “foreign possessions other than stocks, shares & rents,” whether such interest & dividends were remitted to the United Kingdom or not; (2) the matter should be remitted to the comrs. to state which of the items of the trust fund were (a) “securities” within Case IV., r. 1, (b) “stocks, shares or rents” within Case V., r. 1, & (c) “possessions out of the United Kingdom other than stocks, shares or rents” within Case V., r. 2.—*BAKER v. The members were divided into three classes according to income, the largest class consisting of persons in comparatively poor circumstances. An annual membership fee was charged, varying, according to the class, from 2s. 6d. to 10s. 6d. per annum. The fees charged for the services of a nurse, or for admission to the assocn.'s hospital, varied from sums which, in the case of the poorest class, were considerably below the cost of the services rendered, to sums which, in the case of the wealthiest class, were reasonably equivalent to such cost. Nursing facilities, when not required for members, were granted to non-members at increased rates. Funds were held by the assocn. which had been raised by public subscription, & the hospital had been acquired with funds similarly raised. In respect of special charitable donations, necessitous cases from certain parishes received the services of a nurse gratuitously:—Held: the assocn. was established for "charitable purposes only."—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. His trustees spent part of the funds in establishing a temperance hotel, containing a middle-class cafe & a cheap working-class cafe, free reading & recreation-rooms, & bedrooms, & a lecture-hall, which could be hired at moderate figures. Their policy was to make the hotel pay its way without earning profits, & the balance of the trust funds was invested & the interest was used to make good an annual deficit on the working of the hotel:—Held: the interest formed part of the income of a trust established for "charitable purposes only," & was "applied to charitable purposes only."—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. pi. — — — — — For payment of death duties.—Testator, who died in 1919 possessed of large heritable estates, directed his trustees to convey "as soon as convenient after my death" his heritable estates to his widow in life rent & to certain persons in fee. He provided that his trustees should have "all powers of administration competent to a fee-simple proprietor," & authorised them to sell, lease, or feu any parts of the estate. The death duties amounted to £34,000, & the trustees arranged to pay them by sixteen half-yearly instalments. To meet these instalments it was necessary to sell part of the lands, testator's movable estate being insufficient to pay the duties. Pending realisation of sufficient heritage to meet the death duties, which was not completed till 1925, the trustees retained the estates in their own hands, & paid the free annual income to the widow for her maintenance. hundred & fifty £1,000 4 per cent. debentures of the co., & (2) in paying up in full fifty thousand £1 unissued ordinary shares of the co. All the ordinary shares were held by one of the directors. The debentures, all of which were issued to this shareholder, were redeemable at one month's notice by the co. at any time, & at one month's notice by the holder after May 25, 1920. On Apr. 16, 1920, the whole of the £150,000 due on the debentures was paid by the co. to the holder, interest being waived by him, & the co. thereupon borrowed £72,500 from him at 6 per cent. interest, a liability reduced to £33,117 by June 30, 1920:—Held: the debentures constituted a capital receipt in the hands of the shareholder, & he was not assessable to super tax for the year 1920–21 in respect of the amount of the debentures.—WHITMORE v. *Distribution of profits—Assets of company written up—Loans to directors written off.]—*A partnership business was converted into a limited co. in 1916, practically the whole of the shares therein being held by two resps., the original partners, who were brothers, & were also the governing directors. The accounts showed profits of £117,000 for the three years ending Dec. 1919, but no dividends were declared or paid. The co., having power to lend money, granted loans amounting to £283,000 to resps. at 5 per cent. interest, against which the capital assets were increased in value by £226,000 & profits drawn upon to the extent of £57,000. The actual cash lent was mainly provided by a bank overdraft. At a later date resps. duly passed resolutions purporting to cancel the debt of £283,000 by writing it off against the general reserve fund. Resps. having been assessed to super tax upon £283,000:—Held: (1) the loans were genuine loans, which gave rise to no liability to super tax, even if cancelled, except as to the £57,000 taken from profit & loss account; (2) the purported release of the debt was wholly invalid & ineffectual, & resps. remained liable to the co. to repay the whole amount of the £283,000 but were not liable for any super tax thereon.—HALL v. private limited cos. From time to time he withdrew from the business of each of the cos. sums which he used to finance the purchase in his own name of premises to be occupied by himself trading as a firm. The sums so withdrawn were described in the cos.' accounts as "loans" to applt. trading as such firm. Each of the cos. had power to advance money on loan, with or without security, but, while in some cases the loans shown in the accounts to have been made to applt. were subsequently approved formally in general meeting, no previous formal authorisation was given for any of the loans. The loans were not secured by any document, & no provision was made as to repayment or interest thereon. None of the cos. ever declared a dividend for any of the years material to the case. The Special Comrs. decided that the loans in question had not been made in the course of the businesses carried on by the cos., & that they were not genuine loans but constituted income of applt. for the purposes of super tax:—Held: there was ample evidence before the Comrs. to support their conclusion of fact.—*JACOBS v. Owing to difficulties in administration the exors. did not assent to the legacy until June, 1924, & in the meantime dividends had been declared upon the shares in Feb. & Aug. 1923, & in Mar. 1924, which dividends were retained by the exors. until their assent in June, 1924. Resp. was assessed to super tax upon these dividends for the years ending Apr. 5, 1924, & Apr. 5, 1925, respectively, on the basis that they were his income for the years when such dividends were payable by the cos. Resp. contended that as he was not in a position to require payment of the dividends from the exors. until June, 1924, they were not his income or receivable by him until then, & that he was wrongly assessed:—Held: the doctrine of relation of the exor.'s assent to the date of the death applied, & resp. was rightly assessed.—*INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. The sum of £683 was paid before the execution of the lease. The circumstances in which the rent was fixed at £35 per annum were not set out in the lease, which was for a term of seven years, shortly afterwards extended for another year in consideration of resp. contributing £141 towards further repairs, but it was agreed therein that the rent under any new lease should be £140 per annum:—Held: the sums paid by resp. for repairs at the beginning of his tenancy were capital expenditure, & the difference between the net Schedule A. assessment on the house & the rent of £35 actually paid under the lease formed part of his total income for super tax purposes.—*INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. At the time of his death large sums were owing to the firm from residents in enemy countries, & by arrangement with the Inland Revenue these were allowed as bad debts, on the understanding that any sums received in respect of them should be brought into account for income tax as profits of the firm of the year in which they were received. On her husband's death applt. became a partner in the firm. In 1921 a sum was received in respect of the enemy debts, in respect of which the firm was assessed to income tax in the year ended Apr. 5, 1923. By arrangement between the partners applt. bore a proportion of the assessment in respect of the sum so received proportionate to her late husband's share of the profits:—Held: no part of the sum received in respect of the enemy debts formed any part of applt.'s total income for super tax purposes.—*LASSEN v. 831a. Ascertainment of period of twenty-one years.]—Testator, who died in Nov. 1893, gave his net residue, subject to certain life annuities which did not exhaust the income, in trust for a bachelor's children who should attain twenty-one, with a gift over in default. In Mar. 1896, the judge ordered the surplus income to be accumulated for twenty-one years from testator's death, i.e., until Nov. 6, 1914, or until the bachelor's previous death without leaving issue. During this twenty-one years' period the bachelor married & died leaving three children, two of whom were still living. Temporary orders for maintenance were made. In Nov. 1914, the judge declared that as from Nov. 6, 1914, the two children then living were entitled to maintenance under Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 43 (1), but that notwithstanding sub-sect. 2 any income not so applied passed as on an intestacy. In July, 1927, the elder child attained twenty-one, & her contingent moiety vested in possession. The question having arisen whether, having regard to Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 165, the order of Nov. 1914 ought still to be acted on with regard to the younger child's contingent moiety :—Held : (1) the effect of sect. 165 was that the years of minority accumulation, which commenced during the twenty-one years' period, were not to be reckoned in ascertaining that period, & the income of the younger child's contingent moiety must in the first place be applied for her maintenance under Conveyancing Act, 1881, s. 43 (1), & the balance could be validly accumulated under sub-sect. 2; (2) quite apart from sect. 165, the moment the elder child attained a vested interest as a member of the contingent class, there could be no question of intestacy as to any part of the capital or income.—*Re MABER, WARD v. Part XI.—Care and Custody.

1156a. —.]—The welfare of a child is the paramount consideration guiding the ct. in making an order as to its custody. But it is not the only consideration, & the next consideration is the right of a parent, particularly of a parent whose conduct has not been impeached, & effect will be given to a parent's right & desire for the custody of his child where the welfare of that child does not require a contrary decision.—Re THAIN, THAIN v. TAYLOR, [1926] Ch. 676; 95 L. J. Ch. 292; 135 L. T. 99; 70 Sol. Jo. 634, C. A.

934i. One fund supplementary to other—Resort had to primary fund first.]—Testator directed that sums of £3,000 should be invested & held for each of his children, & should be paid over to each of them at the age of twenty-five, & empowered his trustees, for marriage or equipment in business, to pay to a child, although not yet of that age, any portion of that sum. The residue of his estate he left in life interest to his wife & in fee to his children equally. In a question as to whether the wife's life interest or the income of the children's legacies was liable primò loco for the cost of maintaining & educating the children :—Held : as the children were vested in separate estate, the cost of their maintenance & education fell to be met in the first place out of the income of that estate.—*KER'S TRUSTEES v. - 18a. Type calculated to elude observation—Insurers refused benefit of clause.—Deft. co. insured a quantity of leather, consigned c.i.f., for a voyage from New York to Tunis, by a certificate of insurance which provided: "This certificate represents & takes the place of the policy & conveys all the rights of the original policy-holder as fully as if the property were covered by a special policy direct to the holder of this certificate." One of the conditions of the policy was in much smaller print than other parts of the policy & was as follows: "In case of loss or damage to the property hereby insured the loss shall be reported to the representatives of the co., or, if there be no representative of the co., to Lloyd's agent, as soon as the goods are landed or the loss is known or expected." On the day after the arrival of the goods at Tunis the consignee sold them to pltf., who found them to have been damaged by salt water. In an action by pltf. on the certificate of insurance deft. co. contended, (1) that pltf. was not the right person to sue, & (2) that the clause in the policy as to giving notice within a limited time had not been complied with:—Held: the certificate, having been issued by deft. co. itself, enured to the benefit of pltf., & since pltf. did not know of the condition as to notice, & since the clause as to notice was in such small print that it was not such as a reasonable man, reading with reasonable care, would regard as forming part of the contractual terms, pltf. was entitled to recover.—*KOSKAS v. The agent wrote on the form answers to the questions, but the answers so written by him were not correct. The partner then signed the form, & the co. issued to the firm a policy incorporating the written proposal & accepted the premium. On the occurrence of an accident the co. repudiated the policy on the ground that the written answers were untrue:—Held: as the contract was that the written answers should be the basis of the insurance, the co. were not liable on the policy.—*NEWSHOLME BROTHERS v. In their replication pltf. alleged that defts.' agents had knowledge of the above fact at the time the proposal was made & issued the policy notwithstanding such knowledge, & that defts. were estopped from denying liability under the policy:—Held: an exception to the replication, as bad in law & disclosing no cause of action, should be dismissed.—PETREAS & CO.

- 480a. ———. Before or after loss.—A firm of sellers in Africa sold goods, which were resold by the purchasers to pltfs. under a contract which required the second sellers to pass on to the second buyers the usual policy in the trade insuring against the usual risks. The goods were found to be damaged on delivery. A substantial part of the damage was caused at a time when pltfs. were not interested in the goods covered by the insurance, but by an indorsement on the policy all claims under it were assigned to the holder of the policy :—Held : under Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41), s. 50, a marine policy was assignable, unless it contained terms expressly prohibiting the assignment, & it could be assigned either before or after loss. The effect of assigning the policy in the manner in which the policy was assigned, which was the ordinary manner in which policies were assigned in England, was to assign to the person holding the policy the right to sue on any claim which the assignor had on the policy, irrespective of the fact that at the time of the loss or damage the assignee was not interested in the subject-matter lost or damaged. Pltfs. were the assignees of the policy; the assignor of the policy had a right to make a claim in respect of the damage; that claim was assignable, & it was in fact assigned to pltfs., & they were entitled to sue the underwriters in respect of the damage.—*ARON (J.) & Co. v. In an action to determine the effect of the above decrees on treaties of reinsurance entered into between a Russian reinsurance co., having a branch office in London, & an English reinsurance co. :—Held : the decrees did not prevent the Russian co. from discharging their liabilities to the English co. under one of the treaties by a payment in London out of their assets outside Russia, or by means of a set-off against the liabilities of the English co. to them under the treaties.—*FIRST RUSSIAN INSURANCE Co. v. M. sent to L. & Co. particulars of a proposed insurance against fire for pltf. on his dwelling-house, & a policy was issued by defts. to pltf. The policy provided that if there was any misrepresentation as to any fact material to be known for estimating the risk, or any omission to state such fact, defts. should not be liable. Pltf. did not disclose the fact that his house had previously been burnt down & that an insurance co. had paid him in respect of that loss :—Held : (1) M. was not defts.' agent, & M.'s knowledge of the earlier fire, whenever acquired, could not be imputed to defts., & pltf. had concealed a material fact & thereby relieved defts. from all liability under the policy; (2) even if M. was defts.' agent, his knowledge acquired prior to his appointment as agent could not be imputed to defts.—*O'KEEFE v. - 720a. ————]—Pltfs. insured a consignment of gunpowder on a voyage & reinsured with defts. Both the original policy & the reinsurance policies covered perils of the sea & jettison, & were expressed to be "warranted free from loss arising from . . . destruction . . . in a port of distress or otherwise." The original policy contained no admission of seaworthiness, but the reinsurance policies did contain such an admission, & they provided that defts. would "pay as paid thereon," & that the payment should be subject to the same terms as in the original policy. The vessel carried, in addition to the gunpowder, drums of sulphuric acid, & owing to heavy weather some of the drums burst & the acid disabled the machinery, with the result that the ship had to put in to a port of distress. There the required repairs could not be carried out with the gunpowder on board, & it was thrown overboard & became a total loss. Pltfs. paid the owners as for a total loss, & claimed to be reimbursed by defts. :—Held : as the way in which the sulphuric acid was stowed & loaded affected the safety of the ship & rendered her unseaworthy, pltfs. were under no liability on the original policy, & they could not recover from defts. on the reinsurance policies.—*FIREMAN'S FUND INSURANCE CO. v. "On a voyage."—Pltfs. insured a consignment of oranges from any port in Spain to Antwerp, & after the ship had left Valencia & had been in wireless communication with Gibraltar, they reinsured with debt. by a slip, which referred to the fact that the ship had been in such communication with Gibraltar & which contained the words "on a voyage," meaning, according to the evidence, that the risk should attach only from a named port in the course of the voyage. The ship stranded before she reached Gibraltar, the oranges were damaged, & pltfs. had to pay on the policy. In an action on the contract of reinsurance :—Held : on the true reading of the slip, the intention was to limit the risk to the voyage from Gibraltar, & the action failed.—*EAGLE, STAR & BRITISH DOMINIONS INSURANCE CO., LTD. v. - 720c. Insured object in damaged condition at expiration of insurance—Continuation of risk for "immediate consequences" of such damage.]—Pltfs., reinsurers of a risk under a marine policy, reinsured that risk with defts. The policies were subject to the following conditions : "In the event of the vessel not being at the place of destination on the date of the expiration of the policy, the insurance shall continue in force till the end of the day when the vessel arrives at her first place of destination ;" & "If the insured object is in a damaged condition at the time when the insurance expires, the risk shall continue for the immediate consequences of such damage until the object without unnecessary delay has been repaired or sold." On the date of the expiration of the policy, the vessel had not arrived at L. Bay, her first place of destination, but before reaching it she grounded on a reef & was taken into L. Bay badly damaged. Temporary repairs having been effected, she continued her voyage, but as she began to leak again she had to be run ashore in order to prevent sinking, & was subsequently sold as a wreck. Pltfs. having paid the original insurers as for a total loss, claimed against defts. on their reinsurance policy :—Held : the loss was an immediate consequence of the damage done by the original stranding, & the risk covered by the policy continued, until the vessel was repaired with no unnecessary delay, for the immediate consequences of the original damage.—*MERCHANTS' MARINE INSURANCE CO. v. 855a. Effect of clause.]—Claimants insured with defts. a quantity of cork from a port or place between Bordeaux & Nice to the United Kingdom. Claimants were cork growers & had a factory & warehouse near Algeciras, & they had sent from the factory to Algeciras quantities of cork for shipment, & had allowed it to accumulate on the jetty there until there should be enough for a cargo. While a quantity of cork was on the jetty awaiting shipment & before the policy was issued, a fire broke out on the jetty, & to prevent the fire spreading, the authorities jettisoned part of the cork & threw sea-water on the remainder, with the result that a large portion of the cork was lost or damaged. The policy, when issued, contained (inter alia) a marginal clause that the policy was not to enure to the benefit of any fire insurance co., but loss reasonably attributable to fire was covered. It also contained a warehouse to warehouse clause. A claim under the policy was referred to arbn., & the arbitrator treated the marginal clause as non-existent, on the ground that it was not included, or stipulated for, in the slip which represented the true contract between the parties, & he also found that the loss was one reasonably attributable to fire :—Held : (1) the goods on the pier at Algeciras, having come in the ordinary course of transit from the shippers' manufactory at San Roque, were covered by the policy; (2) there being an existing fire & an imminent peril, the damage caused by water, used either to extinguish the fire or to prevent it from spreading, was a proximate consequence of fire, which could be recovered under the general words of the policy, as being ejusdem generis with fire; (3) the underwriters were not relieved from liability by the restraint of princes clause; (4) the case must be remitted to the arbitrator upon the question whether the policy issued, so far as it contained the fire policy clause, was or was not contrary to the usual form of marine insurance on goods.—*SYMINGTON & Co. v. 1265a. ———.]—In an action on a policy of marine insurance on a cargo of celluloid shipped from America to France, defts. pleaded that assured had wrongfully concealed certain facts material to be disclosed to them. The cargo had in fact been previously carried, partly on deck, in a protracted voyage from New York to Halifax, where, the vessel being unable to proceed further, it was unloaded & part put in a warehouse, & the rest left on the open quay, exposed to severe weather, for over two months:—Held: these facts were material to be disclosed to the underwriters, & as they were not disclosed, & there was no waiver of non-disclosure, the policy was vitiated.—*GREENHILL v. 1660a. ———.]—A sailing ship, of which pltf. was mtgee., was insured by a policy, underwritten by deft., against perils of the sea & fire, & as per Institute Time Clauses, clause 8, against loss of the vessel "caused through the negligence of master, mariners, engineers or pilots." The vessel was damaged by ice & she leaked badly, & the captain, expecting a gale in which he thought she would be lost, decided to abandon her, & he set fire to her to prevent her from being a danger to navigation, & he & the crew then abandoned her. In an action by the mtgee. on the policy deft. did not allege any misconduct by the assured, by the mtgee., or by the managing owner, & there was no evidence that the abandonment was a wilful casting away of the ship by the master:—Held: on the facts the abandonment was unreasonable on the part of the master & constituted negligence, & this negligence, resulting in the continuing action of a previously existing peril of the sea, was covered by clause 8, & even apart from that clause, as the peril of the sea had endangered the ship & the negligence of the master resulted in proper measures not being taken to save her, pltf. was entitled to recover under Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41), s. 55 (2) (a).—*LAND v. - 2010a. — Recovery of damages in collision action.—Defts. insured pl’tfs.’ steamer against the usual marine risks, the steamer being valued in the policy at £4,000. During the currency of the policy the steamer collided with another steamer. The ship was repaired at pl’tfs.’ cost, & a collision action by pl’tfs. against the owners of the other steamer was settled, & the owners of the other steamer paid over to pl’tfs. £2,500, as being half the damages. In an action against defts. pl’tfs. contended that, as the balance of their loss was £2,500 they were entitled to recover that amount, it being less than the value of £4,000 put on the steamer in the policy:—Held: defts. were liable only for £1,500, being the difference between £4,000 & £2,500, the amount recovered by pl’tfs. from the owners of the other ship.—GOOLE & HULL STEAM TOWING CO., LTD. v. - 2014a. Loss less than amount paid into court.—Resps. insured appl’ts.’ tug boat by a policy of marine insurance, which provided that, on a claim for a constructive total loss, the insured value was to be taken as the repaired value, & that nothing was to be taken into account for the damaged value, & also that all claims were to be subject to English law & usage. The tug was sunk by collision, & appl’ts. at once gave notice of abandonment. Salvors employed by resps. raised the tug in a few days, & the abandonment was not accepted. The salvors, without the knowledge of appl’ts., made an offer to resps. for the tug, & resps. requested them to put it into writing, which they did. The appellate ct., considering the evidence as to the probable cost of repair, held that there had been only a partial loss to an amount less than that paid into ct.:—Held: (1) the sinking was not an actual total loss; (2) resps. were not precluded from denying that they had accepted the abandonment; (3) there had been no constructive total loss within Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41), s. 60 (2) (i), since even at the date of the abandonment it was not unlikely that the tug could be recovered, & it was unnecessary to consider whether the old rule, that the crucial moment was the commencement of the action, had been modified by sects. 61 & 62; (4) the appellate ct. was not bound to accept the highest estimate of the cost of repairs given by resps.' witnesses, & the ct.'s finding as to the sum necessary, being justified by the evidence & not being based upon any error of principle, could not be questioned.—CAPTAIN J. 2341a. ——— Damages for negligence in watching wreck.]—Defts. & other underwriters insured pltfs.' steamship A. against total loss, & to the extent of three-quarters against damages which pltfs. might have to pay for collisions with other vessels. The A. was sunk in a river & in fact was a constructive total loss. Notice of abandonment was given & acceptance thereof refused. Pltfs. & defts. agreed without prejudice to their rights to take joint action to salve the property. The master of the A. employed a tug to watch the wreck & warn other vessels. Owing to the negligence of the crew of the tug the steamship S. came into collision with the A., & both vessels sustained damage. In an action brought, in the names of pltfs., by & for the benefit of defts., against the S., the owners of the S. counter-claimed & recovered judgment for the whole of their damages & costs, & the underwriters paid three-quarters of the damages & costs to the owners of the S.:—Held: the underwriters were jointly liable to indemnify pltfs. against the remaining one-quarter of the damages & costs of the S., the liability not arising under the policy but upon the contract of indemnity.—SUART & STEAMSHIP ALLEGHANY OF LONDON, LTD. v. basis of the contract of assurance." On July 15 defts. replied stating "The proposal made by you . . . has this day been accepted, & if the health of the life proposed remains meanwhile unaffected, the policy will be issued on payment of the first premium. . . . The risk of the co. will not commence until receipt of the first premium, & the directors meanwhile reserve the power to alter or withdraw this acceptance." On July 21 L. began to feel ill, & on the next day a friend filled in a cheque for the first premium, which L. signed in bed. The cheque was not sent off till the evening of July 24, by which time L. was seriously ill with pneumonia. On July 26 defts. received the cheque, & thereupon they sent to L. a certificate of that date stating that the proposal had been accepted, & that upon the payment of the first quarterly premium a policy would be issued in due course. On July 27 L. died. His administrators sued defts. for the sum insured:—Held: (1) the acceptance of the proposal by defts. was made in reliance upon the continued truth of the representations therein, & as the risk had been materially increased between proposal & acceptance, a condition which defts. had made a condition going to the root of the contract had not been fulfilled; (2) since contracts of insurance were contracts uberrimæ fidei, there was a duty of disclosure on the part of the assured to inform defts. of his change of health, which was a material change in the risk insured, & the position was here even stronger because defts. had inserted express terms in their documents to protect themselves.—*LOOKER v. In any such case the directors may allow to the policy-holder such part of the sum assured as they shall think fit, & the policy shall remain in force to the extent of the pecuniary interest of third parties bonâ fide acquired for valuable consideration, satisfactory proof of which will be required, provided notice thereof in writing shall have been received & admitted by the directors at least one month prior to the date of death." The co. advanced money to the assured on a mtge. of leasehold property & on assignment to them of the policy by way of security. It was provided by a clause in the mtge. that the co. should satisfy themselves primarily out of the policy money. The assured committed suicide, & the co. commenced an action against his extrix. for the purpose of enforcing their security:—Held: upon the true construction of clause 5, the expression "third parties" did not include the assurer, & the co. was entitled to proceed to enforce the security against the leasehold property, & the policy was void.—*ROYAL LONDON MUTUAL INSURANCE SOCIETY v. 2993a. Extension of period of policy by insured—Effect of.—By an insurance policy dated Aug. 13, 1925, an assurance co. agreed to pay the assured, his exors., administrators or assigns £1,000 in the event of his death on or before July 31, 1926. The assured assigned the benefit of the policy to deft. In July, 1926, the assured arranged for an extension of the period of insurance to Oct. 31, 1926, & this extension was given effect to by indorsing on the policy a declaration "that the sum assured shall be payable in the event of the death of the life assured on or before Oct. 31, 1926." No assignment was ever made of the benefit of this extension. The assured died on Oct. 1, 1926:—Held: (1) the extension of the period of the policy by indorsement was not a new contract of insurance, but a variation of the original contract of which the benefit was vested in deft., & she was entitled to recover the policy money by virtue of the assignment to her of the policy; (2) the effect of the transaction was that the assured entered into the contract for the extension of the policy for the benefit of deft. & as trustee for her, & deft. was, on that ground, entitled to the policy money.—*ROYAL EXCHANGE ASSURANCE v. Co. against loss for damages on account of bodily injuries suffered within the period of the policy by any employee:—Held: pltf. had no status to maintain the action.—DISOURDI v. 3214a. ————]*—A policy of insurance provided that the insurance co. would indemnify the assured against all sums which he might be legally liable to pay for damages or compensation to any person for accidental bodily injury or accidental damage to property, where such injury or damage was caused by the driving of the insured's motor car, including law costs when incurred with the consent of the co. While the insured was driving his motor car a collision took place between it & a motor cycle, the result being that the driver of the latter vehicle was injured, a passenger thereon was killed, & both vehicles were damaged. At the time of the collision the insured was drunk through his own unpremeditated folly. The insured was convicted of the manslaughter of the deceased passenger. The injured driver brought an action for personal injuries against the insured, in which he was awarded damages & costs, & the insured incurred costs. The insured also incurred costs in repairing the vehicles, in attending an inquest on deceased, & in defending himself in the police ct. proceedings before his trial. In an action by the insured against the co. for indemnity against these damages & costs:—Held: (1) the policy covered liabilities of the insured for accidental bodily injury to any person or accidental damage to property caused by his negligence, even though gross & attended by criminal consequences; (2) the policy, by covering these liabilities, was not void as against public policy, & the insured was entitled to the indemnity which he claimed.—*JAMES v. Ratable contribution.—G. took out with the M. co. a motor car insurance policy covering himself & any friend driving with G.'s consent, & providing as following: "Condition 6. The extension of the indemnity to friends or relatives of the insured is conditional upon such friend or relative being a licensed & competent driver & not being insured under any other policy. Condition 10. If at the happening of any accident, injury, damage, or loss covered by this policy there shall be subsisting any other insurance or indemnity of any nature whatever covering same, whether effected by insured or by any other person, then the co. shall not be liable to pay or contribute towards any such damage or loss more than a ratable proportion of any sum payable in respect thereof for compensation." L., G.'s brother-in-law, took out with the G. co. a similar policy, providing that "insured will also be indemnified hereunder while personally driving a car not belonging to him provided that there is no other insurance in respect of such other car whereby insured may be indemnified," & that "if at the time of the occurrence of any accident, loss or damage there shall be any other indemnity or insurance subsisting whether effected by insured or by any other person the corp'n. shall not be liable to pay or contribute more than a ratable proportion of any sums payable in respect of such accident loss or damage." While L. was driving G.'s car with G.'s consent it had a collision, & L. had to pay damages. G., as trustee for L., claimed against the M. co., & L. on his own behalf claimed against the G. co.:—Held: in each policy the provision as to ratable contribution qualified the preceding clause, & each co. was liable to pay claimants half the amount claimed.—*GALE v. 3217b. Action by repairer against insurers for repairs—Right of insurers to be subrogated to owner's rights against repairer.—In an action by the repairer of a motor car against an insurance co. for repairs executed at their request, the co. contended that they were entitled to set-off, on the principle of subrogation, the claims of the assured, the owner of the car, against the repairer, who had been driving the car on the occasion of a collision. The insurance co. had commenced an action, in the name of the owner, against the repairer for the damage done to the car by his negligent driving, but, at the date of the commencement of the action by the repairer, certain claims of the assured under the policy in regard to third party risks, etc., were still unsettled:—Held: the fact that these claims were then unsettled prevented the insurance co. from being subrogated to the owner's rights against the repairer, & the co. were not entitled to rely on these as a set-off to the repairer's claim.—

- 3260a. "Dishonesty"—Discounting bills of exchange subsequently dishonoured.]—Pltf. was insured by two policies, subscribed by deft., against loss or deprivation of bills of exchange through theft & any other loss whatsoever through theft or other dishonesty. During the currency of the policies pltf. was induced by false representations to discount certain bills of exchange. The bills were dishonoured, & pltf. brought an action on the policies on the ground that he had suffered a loss through having dealt in the bills. Deft. contended that the above provision in the policies only covered accidental loss of documents or physical deprivation of the possession of documents:—Held: pltf.'s loss was caused by dishonesty within the policy.—WASSERMAN v. g i. — Misstatements in proposal—What amount to.—A motor vehicle in the possession of the purchaser under a hire-purchase agreement was destroyed by fire. An action was brought by the two parties to the hire-purchase agreement under a policy issued in the names of both parties. Defts. pleaded that all benefit under the policy had been forfeited through misstatements in the proposal. The proposal began "I/we, the undersigned desire to insure my/our motor vehicle." After the words "owner's full name," was written the names of both pltf.s. "for their respective rights & interests." The question "Have you ever made a claim against any insurance co." was answered "No." The proposal was signed by only one pltf. Although pltf. who signed the proposal had never made a claim, the other had done so:—Held: a non-suit, on the ground that the evidence proved the plea, should be set aside.—MEYERS & PAIDINGTON MOTOR SERVICE, LTD. v. DALGETY & CO., LTD. (1926), 26 S. R. N. S. W. 195; 43 N. S. W. W. N. 39.—AUS.

g ii. — — — — —.]—A proposal for the insurance of a motor car contained the question, "Has any proposal for insurance, or any policy ever been withdrawn, declined or cancelled?" Pltf.'s answer was "No." Pltf. had held a policy over the car with another co., but by arrangement, & to oblige pltf., this policy had been terminated:—Held: the word "cancelled" meant the determination of the policy by the unilateral act of the co., & the termination of the policy by mutual arrangement did not amount to a cancellation, & the answer to the

g iii. — — — — —.]—Held: a statement that the motor car insured was a new one, whereas in fact it was a second-hand one, was a material representation which avoided the policy.—ABASS v. GLOBE & RUTGERS F. INS. CO., [1927] 1 D. L. R. 435; 59 N. S. R. 81.—CAN.

- 141a. ——— Pending hearing of summons against applicant.]—Appls., the licensee & the owners of a public-house, applied to the licensing justices on Mar. 1 for a renewal of the licence, which was due to expire on Apr. 4. The justices, on the ground that summonses were pending against the licensee for supplying during non-permitted hours intoxicating liquor for consumption on the premises, adjourned the consideration of the application to the next transfer sessions to be held on Apr. 12. On Mar. 4 the licensee was convicted on the summonses, & on Apr. 12 the licensing justices refused the renewal:—Held: the adjournment did not amount to a refusal of the renewal.—THOMAS v. NEWINGTON LICENSING JJ. (1926), 136 L. T. 638; 43 T. L. R. 181; sub nom. THOMAS v. NEWINGTON LICENSING JJ., MEUX'S BREWERY CO., LTD. v. NEWINGTON LICENSING JJ., 91 J. P. 37; 25 L. G. R. 109.

- 202a. Applicant's willingness to contribute to compensation fund.]—A question arose which of two adjacent licensed houses should be granted a renewal of its licence, & which should be suppressed. The owners of each house submitted to the licensing justices plans of proposed alterations, & the owners of one of the houses offered to pay £1,250 to the compensation fund if the alterations were sanctioned. The same licensing justices sat as compensation authority to consider the question of redundancy, & decided to renew the licence of the house whose owners had offered the contribution, it appearing from the evidence that that house, when altered, could be made the better of the two. They then, as licensing justices, approved the alterations to that house:—Held: (1) in considering the question of the contribution offered to the compensation fund the licensing justices had taken extraneous matter into account, & as this must necessarily have affected their minds as compensation authority, their decision must be quashed; (2) it was contrary to the spirit of the Licensing Acts, though it might be within the letter of them, that the powers of the compensation authority should be delegated to the licensing

340a. ——— All relevant matters—Means of access to premises.]—Appcts. desired to alter licensed premises in a manner requiring the consent of the licensing justices. The justices refused to sanction the proposed alterations, unless appcts. bricked up a door which was in the yard behind the premises, & which gave access to a site on which a public market place was being erected:—Held: the words of Licensing (Consolidation) Act, 1910 (c. 24), s. 71, which were descriptive of the alterations requiring the justices' consent, did not limit the justices to consideration of those named matters; & it was their duty to consider all relevant matters, of which the means of access to the premises might be one.—*R. v. 381. For the existing paragraph substitute the following paragraph:—

——— Instructing solicitor to oppose.]—On an application to the licensing justices of a county borough for the renewal of an old on-licence the justices referred the matter to the compensation authority of the borough under Licensing (Consolidation) Act, 1910 (c. 24), s. 19, & at a further meeting they resolved that a solr. should be instructed to appear before the compensation authority & oppose the renewal on their behalf. The solr. duly appeared & opposed, & the compensation authority refused the renewal, subject to payment of compensation. Three of the justices who sat & voted as members of the compensation authority had been parties to the resolution of the licensing justices authorising a solicitor to appear on their behalf:—Held: the three justices were disqualified from sitting on the compensation tribunal on the ground of bias, & the decision of the tribunal must be set aside.—*FROME UNITED BREWERIES CO. v. sd. Declaratory Judgments Act, 1908
—Discretion of court—Anticipatory construction.—The jurisdiction of the ct.
to give or make a declaratory judgment or order under sect. 3 of the above Act is discretionary, & the ct. will not give or make such judgment or order by way of anticipatory interpretation or construction of statutory powers in the abstract, without knowledge of the facts & circumstances under which such powers might be exercised, or without any certitude that many of the powers will ever be exercised. Neither will the ct. exercise its discretion to give or make any judgment or order on a question of construction which, whichever way it is decided, does not necessarily put an end to the litigation.

- 396a. ——— Letter purporting to enclose engrossment—& engrossment.]—A prospective lessee having orally agreed to take a lease from a prospective lessor, a draft lease embodying the terms was approved by their respective solrs. By arrangement the engrossments of the lease & counterpart were then prepared by the lessee's solrs., who subsequently wrote to the lessor's solr. purporting to enclose the engrossment of the lease for his signature, & saying they had written to the lessee & expected to exchange parts shortly. By mistake the engrossment of the counterpart was enclosed to the lessor's solr., & the engrossment of the lease to the lessee, who subsequently delivered it to the lessor's solr.'s messenger in exchange for the engrossment of the counterpart. Shortly after this the lessee, relying (inter alia) on Stat. dwelling-house, wherein no business of any kind is carried on." There was a further covenant by the lessee that he would not do or suffer to be done in or on the demised premises anything which might, in the judgment of the lessors, be or grow to the injury or annoyance of the lessors or their tenants, or the occupiers of adjoining premises. In 1914 the lessee, without the knowledge of or licence from the lessors, sublet three rooms of the first floor of the demised house to a subtenant, whose tenancy expired in June, 1926. On July 19 the lessee, without any licence from the lessors, sublet the same three rooms to P. as a subtenant at a rent of £1 a week. In an action by the lessors against K. & P., & the mtgees. of K., claiming possession of the house as against all defts., on the ground that the lease had been forfeited by reason of the breaches of the two covenants:—Held: (1) there had been a forfeiture of the lease by breaches of both the restrictive covenants, & the words in the first covenant, "wherein no business of any kind is carried on," must be construed as adding to the stringency of the covenant that the house should be used as a private dwelling-house; (2) Rent Restriction Acts afforded no defence to the action, as K. was in actual possession of the whole of the dwelling-house in the interval between the two tenancies, & 1923 Act, s. 2 (1), came into operation, & the premises had become decontrolled.—*BARTON v. sf. Failure to keep premises in tenantable repair.]—The landlord of a house brought an action against the tenant for decree for payment of the rent due. In defence the tenant averred that the landlord was in breach of his obligation to keep the premises in tenantable condition, in respect that he had failed to renew certain piping which he knew or ought to have known was defective, with the result that a pipe burst & defender's effects were damaged, & she was compelled to leave the house. Defender retained the rent, & also counterclaimed for the damage suffered by her:—Held: a landlord's claim for rent was liquid only if he had fulfilled his obligations under the mutual contract of lease, & defender was entitled to retain her rent, & also to counterclaim for the damage she alleged she had suffered.—*FINGLAND & MITCHELL v. him & £125. If this difference were not refunded by the lessors within fourteen days of demand the tenant was to be at liberty to deduct such difference from the next instalment of rent. The lease contained a covenant by the tenant that he would duly & punctually pay & discharge all rates, taxes, duties, charges, assessments, & outgoings payable in respect of the demised premises. The tenant in a year of the tenancy between midsummer & midsummer paid three half-years' rates, amounting in all to over £125, & having demanded the refund of the excess from the landlords, & having failed to get payment of the same within fourteen days of the demand, deducted it from his next instalment of rent:—Held: under the landlords' covenant to refund, the tenant was entitled to make the deduction.—*SOWERBY v. 4739a. — Dilapidations—Neglect to repair.—Testator devised a dwelling-house to his wife for her life, she “keeping same in good repair & condition, reasonable wear & tear excepted,” & after her death he directed that same should fall into his residuary estate, which was to be divided among his children in equal shares. Testator’s widow occupied the premises until her death, a period of forty-two years. She did nothing actively to injure the premises, but did nothing substantially to counteract the natural process of decay. Pltfs., the trustees of the will, alleged that she had neglected to keep the premises in good repair & condition in conformity with the terms of the will, & claimed from her exors. the cost of the necessary repairs:—Held: testator’s widow, having accepted & occupied the premises, was bound by the terms of the devise; the words of the exception were not to be treated as mere surplusage, & a reasonable meaning must be given to them, but having regard to the length of time during which no substantial repairs had been done to the premises, & to the extent of the damage thereby caused, the widow, as tenant for life, was not protected by the words of the exception, & her exors. were liable for the damage arising from the natural process of decay.—HASKELL v. MARLOW, [1928] 2 K. B. 45; 97 L. J. K. B. 311; 138 L. T. 521; 44 T. L. R. 171, D. C.

4760a. To keep in good & proper order & condition—Ornamental waters—Removal of mud.]—Among the covenants in a lease was one by which deft. covenanted at all times during the term to maintain, keep, & leave

“all pleasure grounds,” lawns, walks, borders, & shrubberies in good & proper order & condition. Included in the pleasure grounds were ornamental waters consisting of two ponds & three lakes, which afforded boating & trout fishing. Pltf. complained of various breaches of the above covenant, particularly in respect of the accumulation of mud in the lodge lake & in a portion of the upper boat lake, thereby causing deterioration in the trout fishing, & required the lakes to be cleared of mud & weeds. Deft. had regularly cut the weeds in the lakes & kept in order the sluices & weirs, but repudiated liability to clean out any of the mud:—Held: in order to comply with the covenant which was absolutely unqualified in terms, deft. was liable to remove so much of the mud in the lodge lake, & also in a specified portion of the upper boat lake, as would leave a sheet of water of not less than 2 feet 6 inches in depth throughout.—*HORLICK v. The portion of the wall belonging to defts. collapsed, demolishing pltfs.’ inn:—Held: (1) the doctrine of Rylands v. Fletcher (1868), L. R. 3 H. L. 330, had never been applied to affect the liability of an owner who was out of possession at the time when the injury took place; though defts. did not erect the wall, they took it over when they bought the property as the boundary & retaining wall for their property, & they were only using that property in the ordinary ways in which property is used, so that they were outside the authority of that case; (2) there was no reason to suppose that when they let the property to their tenant it was in a ruinous condition, or that in the exercise of a reasonable diligence they should have ascertained that it was in a ruinous condition; & pltfs. failed to bring their case within the principle of Todd v. Flight, No. 4879, ante.—ST. ANNE’S WELL BREWERY CO. v. ROBERTS (1928), 92 J. P. 180; 44 T. L. R. 703; 26 L. G. R. 638, C. A.

Part XX.—Insurance and Damage by Fire.

5069a. In named office "or in some other responsible insurance office to be approved by the lessor"—Duty of lessor.—A covenant by a lessee to insure the demised premises in the joint names of the lessee & the lessor in a named insurance office, "or in some other responsible insurance office to be approved by the lessor," does not confer upon the lessee an alternative to be exercised at his volition; & under this covenant the lessee cannot properly tender an office which is not approved by the lessor.—TREDEGAR v. HARWOOD, [1929] A. C. 72; 97 L. J. Ch. 392; 139 L. T. 642; 44 T. L. R. 790, H. L.

5070a. Not to do anything to impose heavier insurance burden on premises—Obligation of lessor as to adjacent premises.—Lessees of factory premises for a term of twenty-one years covenanted to pay as additional rent such sums as the lessors might expend in effecting or maintaining the insurance of the demised premises against fire, & not to do or suffer anything on the demised premises which would render payable an increased or extra premium for the insurance of the demised premises or other premises adjacent thereto. The lessors covenanted to keep the demised premises insured against fire & that the lessees should have quiet enjoyment of them. Subsequently, the lessors let premises adjacent to the demised premises to another lessee, whose trade as a wood-worker rendered it impossible for the insurance of the demised premises to be effected except at considerably increased premiums:—Held: (1) the lessors, by dealing with the adjoining premises in a way which was not unreasonable or unbusinesslike, which did not affect the originally demised premises physically & which had rendered it, not less easy or legal, but substantially more expensive to conduct on them the business for which they had been demised, had not so interfered with the purpose for which those premises had been demised as to have derogated from their own grant of them; (2) the covenant by the lessees not to do or suffer anything on the originally demised premises which would render payable an increased or extra premium for the insurance of those, or adjacent, premises did not impliedly put the lessors under a similar obligation with regard to their user of adjacent premises.—O'CEDAR, LTD. v. SLOUGH TRADING CO., [1927] 2 K. B. 123; 96 L. J. K. B. 709; 137 L. T. 208; 43 T. L. R. 382.

owing to an escape of burning gas from the heater female pltf. was seriously burned:—Held: the landlord was liable to both pltf.s., for although the heater was not part of the demised premises, there was a positive agreement to keep it in repair, which gave rise to an action by the tenant for damages for breach of contract.—HORNE v. - 6636a. Substitution of licence or tenancy at will under purchase agreement—Rescission of agreement.]—By an agreement in writing dated Aug. 28, 1926, deft., the weekly tenant of a house to which Rent Restriction Acts applied, agreed to buy it from pltf., the landlord, for £900. The agreement provided that deft. acknowledged owing pltf. £63 10s. arrears of rent, & that pltf. would accept £50 in settlement; that, until certain mtges. had been transferred from pltf. to deft., pltf. should remain in absolute ownership of the premises; & that, until completion of the conveyance, deft., who was to remain in possession, should pay to pltf. interest on the £950 at the rate of 6 per cent. with interest on interest dating from Sept. 1, 1926. Deft. also agreed to pay certain deposits, pltf., on failure of such payments, to be entitled to rescind the agreement & enter into possession of the house. Deft. agreed to maintain the house in a good state of repair & to pay rates, taxes, & insurance. On Feb. 27, 1927, pltf. rescinded the agreement under the powers reserved in it, but deft. refused to give him possession of the house:—Held: (1) the effect of the agreement, as indicating the intention of the parties, was to determine the weekly tenancy, & to substitute for it either a licence or a tenancy at will, which, in its turn, was revoked or determined by the rescission of the purchase agreement, & deft. had no contractual right to resist the claim for possession; (2) deft. was not protected

sd. Agreement acted on by parties.]—The renunciation of an existing lease by the tenant, & the grant of a new lease by the landlord, can be inferred from a written obligation on the part of the landlord to grant a new lease followed by actings of parties amounting to rei interventus & by possession on the part of the tenant, not only where the landlord is a fee-simple proprietor, but also where he is an heir of entail in possession; & a lease so constituted is binding upon succeeding heirs of entail.—*CAMPBELTOWN COAL CO. v. by Rent Restriction Acts, because after Aug. 28, 1926, deft. remained in possession of the house by virtue of the contract of purchase, & not as a statutory tenant, & under that contract she was either a licensee or a tenant at will, & after its rescission, if she had been a licensee, she was not a tenant who had held over under the Acts, & if she had been a tenant at will, her tenancy had been at no rent, &, by Increase of Rent & Mtge. Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920 (c. 17), s. 12 (7), it must be ignored, with the result that the house was to be treated as untenanted & pltf. had an unrestricted right to recover possession of it; (3) the rescission of the purchase agreement did not deprive pltf. of his right to the arrears of rent which had accrued due to him before the agreement was made, but it did destroy deft.'s right to enforce the agreement with pltf. to accept a less sum than that which was in fact owing.—TURNER v. 6674a. —.]—In 1910, deft., a county police constable, became quarterly tenant of a house. In 1912 the county police authority, which had till then made a grant in aid of the rent of houses occupied by police constables, decided that for the future the chief constable should be the tenant of those houses, that the constables should occupy them as servants, that the chief constable should pay all rent, rates & taxes, & that a deduction should be made in respect thereof from the men's pay. Deft. knew of, & made no demur to, this arrangement, but no express notice to determine his tenancy was given. From 1912 onwards the demands for rent were sent to deft., addressed to the county authority. These deft. took to the police office, received the full amount due, & paid it at the estate office of the landlord, being given a receipt acknowledging payment by the county authority, which receipt he sent to the county treasurer. No demands for rates & taxes were made to deft. This course of business continued for fourteen years, deft. continuing to occupy the house & his name remaining on the estate books as tenant. There was no written surrender or assignment of the tenancy:—Held: (1) there was evidence from which the inferences of fact could be drawn that in 1912 deft. agreed with the landlord that he would forthwith surrender his tenancy, that the landlord agreed with deft. to accept the surrender & accept the chief constable as his tenant, & that the deft. would in future occupy the house as a servant of the chief constable & not as a tenant, & on those facts there had been a surrender of the tenancy by operation of law; (2) deft. was in the circumstances estopped from denying that he had surrendered or assigned the tenancy.—*METCALFE v. The tenant did not herself occupy the dwelling-house or any part of it, but sublet the ground floor furnished, & the basement unfurnished, to sub-tenants whose occupation ceased shortly before the end of the tenancy :—Held : 1920 Act was not prevented from applying to the dwelling-house, so as to entitle the tenant to rely upon sect. 2 (3), because (1) the tenant took & used the dwelling-house only for the purpose of subletting it, inasmuch as the taking & user of premises only for that purpose did not make them business premises to which the Act did not apply; (2) the tenant did not herself occupy the dwelling-house, & her sub-tenants ceased to occupy it before the end of the tenancy; (3) the tenant had sublet the ground floor furnished to sub-tenants, who ceased to occupy it before the end of the tenancy.—EBNER v. at Martinmas 1923. In Mar. 1922, the tenant sub-let the house, garden, & certain offices at a rent of £20, the ratable value of the garden & offices being less than one-quarter of that of the house. On the expiry of the farm tenancy at Martinmas 1923, the landlord let to the subtenant the house, garden, & offices, with the steading & farmyard, at a rent of £35. The ratable value of the garden, offices, steading, & farmyard was more than one-quarter of that of the house :—Held : as the value of the land & other premises let with the house since Martinmas 1923 exceeded one-quarter of that of the house, 1920 Act did not apply to the subjects, the addition of the farmyard & steading having altered the identity of the house, & thus elided sect. 12 (6) of the Act.—HALDANE v. In May 1927, by virtue of the Act, which provided that in certain cases owners might be rated instead of occupiers, the city council passed a resolution transferring the liability for the rate as regards premises of which the ratable value did not exceed £10. The resolution took effect on Oct. 5, 1927. The rate, which the owners became liable to pay, was calculated on the basis of nine-tenths of the amount in the pound of the full consolidated rate previously payable by the occupier. The landlords of certain premises of a ratable value not exceeding £10 claimed that they were entitled to increase the rent of one of their tenants, under 1920 Act, by the amount of the full consolidated rate previously payable by the tenant:—Held: under sect. 2 (1) (b), the landlords were entitled to increase the rent, as there had been an increase in the amount of the rates for the time being payable by the landlords over the corresponding amount paid by them in the period specified by the sect.; but the amount of the permitted increase was an amount equivalent to nine-tenths of the full consolidated rate, & not the full amount of that rate.—HODGKINSON v. He put electric fittings in each floor, & did other work in connection with the gas & water supply, & let portion of the house to deft., describing it in the agreement as "consisting of a flat of three rooms & front basement on parlour floor." It had not a separate bath or separate sanitary accommodation, & there was no physical separation of it, as a residence, from the rest of the house:—Held: (1) the dwelling-house had not been "bona fide reconstructed by way of conversion

The rent being in arrear, pltf. served notice to quit on deft., & instituted ejectment proceedings:—Held: (2) the letting was a new letting of portion of altered premises, so as to entitle pltf. to charge a rent without regard to the standard rent of the whole house; (3) deft.'s claim for apportionment of the rent must be dismissed; (4) pltf. was entitled to an order for possession, the ct. granting a stay for a limited period, the order for possession not to issue if the rent was paid within that period.—BOYLE v. The landlords applied to the county ct. under 1920 Act, s. 2 (6), to determine the question whether the notice of increase was valid, whether they were responsible for the whole of the repairs, &, if not for what proportion they were responsible:—Held: although questions of law were involved in the matters submitted, the terms of the Act made the decision of the county ct. judge final, & no appeal lay from it.—*ELVINGTON TENANTS, LTD. v. sq. Immaterial errors—Effect of.—In an action for recovery of arrears of rent, the tenant maintained that a previous notice of intention to increase rent was invalid, in respect that (1) the notified increase of rates was inaccurate, & (2) a charge for stair gas had wrongly been included in the increased rates:—Held: as the tenant had suffered no prejudice, & as the notice did not contain any statement which was false or misleading in any material respect, & was as accurate as it could be in the circumstances at the time when it was given, the notice was not invalid.—*CLYDEBANK INVESTMENT CO., LTD. v. st. As to amount of rent.—A notice of intention to increase rent, which was in writing & in the statutory form, was objected to by the tenant as incompetent, on the ground that the landlord had stated, as the "rent payable," not the standard rent, but a higher amount which he was receiving at the date of the notice, & had further failed to set forth how the existing excess over standard rent had become due:—Held: as the tenant had already for some time been paying without objection rent at the figure stated in the notice, the onus was upon him to establish that the amount in excess of standard rent was not legally exigible, & as he had failed to do so, his objection fell to be repelled.—M'KELLAR v. M'MASTER, [1926] S. C. 754.—SCOT.

7167 i. Amendment—Mode of.—A notice of intention to increase rent, which was in writing & in the statutory form, showed under the appropriate headings how the proposed increase was made up. As the item of occupier's rates was subsequently found to have been overestimated, the original notice was amended by a corrective notice, sent by the landlord's factors & received by the tenant before any increased rent had become due:—Held: amendment of a defective notice was not restricted to the method prescribed by 1923 Act, s. 6, the primary purpose of which was to validate defective notices which had been acted on, & it was competent to amend the notice by the method adopted.—*M'KELLAR v. D., who subsequently applied that the standard rent of his rooms should be fixed by an apportionment of the rent of the entire house:—Held : the opening words of the proviso to 1923 Act, s. 2 (1), were merely descriptive of the position at the time when the question of decontrol arose, & should be construed as "where part of a dwelling-house is or during the currency of this Act shall be lawfully sublet," & D.'s rooms were saved from decontrol by the proviso.—DOULIN v. Tenant at rent less than two-thirds of ratable value.]—The tenant of a dwelling-house under a ninety-eighth years' lease at a rent which was less than two-thirds of the ratable value of the house was in possession of the house at the passing of 1923 Act:—Held : notwithstanding 1920 Act, s. 12 (7), the tenant was not, as against the freeholders, to be deemed to be the landlord of the house for the purposes of 1923 Act, s. 2 (1), so as to cause the house to become decontrolled.—BROOKES v. LIFFEN, [1928] 2 K. B. 347 ; 138 L. T. 676 ; 92 J. P. 102 ; 44 T. L. R. 350 ; 26 L. G. R. 199, C. A.

7352d. ———.]—(1) The expression "landlord" in 1923 Act, s. 2 (1), is not to be construed in the strict sense as requiring a tenant & a contract of tenancy, but it must be used either in the looser sense of "owner," or in the still looser sense of a person who at a later stage is going to appear as a landlord contesting with a tenant the terms of his tenancy. Neither in 1920 Act, nor in 1923 Act, is the word "landlord" used in its technical sense of a person between whom & the tenant a contractual relationship of landlord & tenant exists.

Where a person who is a "landlord" within 1923 Act, s. 2 (1), can prove either that he was in possession of the whole of the dwelling-house at the date of the passing of 1923 Act, or at any time since that date, 1920 Act ceases to apply to that dwelling-house & to every part of it. The whole house & every part of it is decontrolled, & a subsequent letting of the dwelling-house, or of any part of it, cannot revive control.

(2) The expression "the tenant" in 1923 Act, s. 2 (2), refers to the sitting tenant, i.e. the person who is the tenant at the time when the lease referred to in the sub-sect. is granted.

(3) Where a lessee at a rent less than two-thirds of the ratable value is in actual possession of the dwelling-house after July 31, 1923, the dwelling-house is thereby decontrolled, because, under 1920 Act, s. 12, the lessee must be treated as the landlord, & a subsequent sub-letting of certain rooms forming part of that dwelling-house does not revive control.—LLOYD v. COOK, GOUDGE v. BROUGHTON, SIMSON v. MIATT, BARTRAM v. BROWN, BARKER v. HUTSON, [1929] 1 K. B.

- 2198a. — Consideration of all circumstances.—Where an action for defamation is tried by a judge with a jury, & pltf. recovers nominal damages only, the judge, in deciding whether there is “good cause” for depriving pltf. of costs, should take into consideration all the circumstances of the case, both before & after the issue of the writ. The smallness of the damages is only one element for consideration. The judge must exercise a discretion independent of any view expressed by the jury on the question of costs.—MARTIN v. - 322a. ——— No authority to create lien.]—Pltfs. let three taxicabs to B. on hire-purchase agreements, which provided that B. should not have authority to create a lien on the taxicabs in respect of repairs. Up to May 1, 1925, the cabs, with the consent of pltfs., had been garaged at defts.' garage, & B. owed defts. the balance of a general account for garage rent, goods supplied, & washing, cleaning, & repairing the cabs. Defts. had never been aware of the terms of the agreements between B. & pltfs. On May 1, 1925, pltfs. terminated the agreements, as B. was in arrear with his payments, but defts. refused to hand them the cabs, asserting that they had a lien for repairs. In an action for the delivery up of the cabs & damages for their detention:—Held: the lien might attach notwithstanding the provision that B. should not have authority to create a lien, &, although defts. did not have continuous possession of the cabs, yet since, in letting B. take them out to ply for hire, they parted with possession without any intention to abandon the right of lien, the action failed. —ALBEMARLE SUPPLY CO., LTD. v. - 139a. — Arbitration condition precedent.—The Crown requisitioned appcts.’ ship under a charterparty, which provided that any dispute under the charter should be referred to arbn. under Arbn. Act, 1889 (c. 49), & which concluded as follows: “& it is further mutually agreed that such arbn. shall be a condition precedent to the commencement of any action at law.” In July, 1917, the ship was lost, but appcts. did not proceed to arbn. until Dec. 1923. The Crown contended that, as the arbn. was not commenced within six years of the loss, the claim was barred by Stat. Limitations, 1623 (c. 16):—Held: under the arbn. clause no cause of action arose until the award was made, & time did not run until the making of the award, & the claim was not barred.—BOARD OF TRADE v. gagee.]—In 1902 freehold hereditaments were assured to a mtgee. In Feb. 1907, the
to be, of unsound mind. The last payment in respect of interest before the date on which the mtgee. became of unsound mind was made on Jan. 30, 1907. In Mar. 1907, the husband of the mtgee. accepted, on behalf of the mtgee., a further payment on account of interest. Since that payment no further payment of interest was made. On a summons for foreclosure issued in 1926 by the mtgee.:—Held: (1) the right to commence proceedings first accrued, at the latest, at the date fixed for the redemption of the mtge., which was a date earlier than that on which the mtgee. became of unsound mind; (2) the foreclosure proceedings must be dismissed, inasmuch as, in view of the express words of Real Property Limitation Act, 1837 (c. 28), a disability beginning after the date when the right to bring the action first accrued, or must be deemed to have first accrued, would not entitle the mtgee. to the protection given by Real Property Limitation Act, 1874 (c. 57), s. 3.—PURNELL v. ROCHE, expended in 1894 in satisfying liabilities of testatrix, & pleaded the appropriate statute of limitation. The exors. had set aside sums to answer the £2,000 legacy in part, & on L.'s death payments of capital were from time to time made to the persons interested in remainder, the last payment being made in June, 1921. If the stock had been paid away in 1894, the statute of limitation afforded a good defence except in regard to the share of the £2,000 legacy, which only fell into possession in 1916:—Held: (1) as the claim was against exors. holding on express trusts, it was not a claim to recover a legacy within Real Property Limitation Act, 1874 (c. 57), s. 8, & the statute of limitation applicable was Trustee Act, 1888 (c. 59), s. 8, under which the period for which the statute had to run in order to afford a defence was only six years; (2) the payments relied on, being payments in respect of the part of testatrix's estate accounted for, did not constitute an acknowledgment of liability in regard to that part which the exors. were said to have misapplied; (3) the statute afforded a good defence in regard to the share of the £2,000 legacy also.—*Re OLIVER, THEOBALD v. 1709a. — — — — —.]— In 1900 W. mortgaged shares to L. to secure a loan with interest. L. received dividends to clear the interest up to 1908, when they ceased & the shares became of practically no value, L. retaining them, but without foreclosing. In 1916 & thereafter the value of the shares increased enormously, & such large dividends were paid that by 1921 L. had received sufficient to pay off the capital of the loan & all interest in arrear. He died in 1923. Pltfs., who were entitled to the equity of redemption of the mtge., took out a summons claiming redemption, & also repayment of the excess of the amount of dividends received by L. or his exors. over & above the amount due under the mtge.:—Held: (1) equity ought not to deprive a mtgor. of his right to redeem if the debt had been or could be repaid, the security were still available, & the position of the mtgee. had not been altered to his prejudice by the delay; (2) the limit of twelve years applicable by Real Property Limitation Act, 1874 (c. 57), in the case of a mtge. of realty would not, by equitable principles, be extended so as to support a plea of delay & laches & be made applicable to a mtge. of personalty.—*WELD v. 529a. Jurisdiction to direct settlement of lunatic's property—Change of circumstances—Causing party to "suffer an injustice"—Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 171 (1).—A lunatic not so found had been of unsound mind since 1882. She was a spinster aged eighty-one, & was possessed of personal property of the value of £2,000. From the time when she became of unsound mind she had lived under the care of an uncle & aunt, who had provided £2,076 towards her maintenance. The uncle died in 1885 & the aunt in 1907. By the will of the latter an annuity of £300 was bequeathed for the support of the lunatic. Upon the death of the aunt a sister of the lunatic was appointed receiver of her estate & acted until 1920, when she was relieved & a sister of appcts. was appointed in her place. On her death in 1925 one of appcts. was appointed & was receiver of the lunatic's estate. In 1880 before her reason left her the lunatic made a will, by which she bequeathed her property to her three sisters, all of whom were dead. On an application by appcts., the residuary legatees under the aunt's will & second cousins of the lunatic, to the ct. to exercise the powers vested in it by sect. 171 of the above Act, & to direct a settlement to be made of the property of the lunatic:—Held: (1) the phrase "suffer an injustice" in sect. 171 (1) (c) must not be rigidly confined to a deprivation of a strict legal right, since that would stultify the operation of the sect. altogether, but it must in its context include the destruction of a clear moral claim, or even the disappointment of a thoroughly legitimate & well founded expectation, & in the circumstances appcts. would "suffer an injustice" if the recent change in the law of intestacy were allowed to defeat the moral claim which they had to succeed to the estate of the lunatic, particularly in view of the continuous recognition, pecuniary & otherwise, which their side of the family had throughout shown of the obligations imposed on them by their kinship to the lunatic; (2) there had been "a change of circumstances" within the sub-sect. since the execution by the lunatic of her will, by reason of the deaths of her three sisters to whom she had left her property; (3) the case was one in which the ct. ought to exercise the discretion vested in it by sect. 171, by directing the receiver to execute a settlement of the property of the lunatic, to be approved by the judge in lunacy, which must be subject during the life of the lunatic to her right to be maintained out of the income, & if & so far as might be necessary out of the capital thereof, & subject also to any effective disposition by will or deed which the lunatic might make should she recover.—Re FREEMAN, [1927] 1 Ch. 479; 96 L. J. Ch. 225; 136 L. T. 657; 71 Sol. Jo. 272, C. A.

Annotation:—As to (1) Consd. Re Greenc, Re Whitworth, Re E. A., Re Fraser, Re Wood, [1928] Ch. 528.

529b. ————.]—Under a marriage settlement dated Oct. 16, 1879, personalty funds were settled by a husband & wife upon trusts under which, after the death of the husband in 1915, the wife was entitled to the income for life with a power of appointment by deed or will among the issue of the marriage, & in default of appointment the funds were settled in trust for the two surviving children, now aged forty-six & forty-four years, who by inquisitions in 1902 & 1910 had been certified to be of unsound mind. In default of children who attained twenty-one or being daughters married, the wife's fund would have passed to the wife absolutely & the husband's fund to the husband, who had given all his property to his wife. By his will the wife's father, who died in 1885, gave his residuary real & personal estate upon trusts under which, in the events which had happened, his daughter, the wife, received the income for her life with a power of appointment by deed or will amongst her issue. In default of appointment the residue was settled on trusts under which the wife's two children were the only beneficiaries. Neither of the children had made a will & apart from their mother & an aunt aged eighty-two, who was a spinster of unsound mind, their next of kin were second cousins, so that if they survived their mother & aunt, the Crown would take on their deaths under an intestacy. In these circumstances the wife took out summonses under the above sect., asking the ct. to direct settlements of the children's personal property under the marriage settlement & her father's will, which should include trusts in her favour absolutely after the death of each child or, alternatively, a general power of appointment by will so as to enable her to benefit friends & charities in which the family had always been interested. Before the applications were heard an arrangement was come to between the wife & the Crown by which, subject to the approval of the ct., the Crown consented to the wife's having a general power of appointment over the whole of the marriage settlement funds & over the father's residuary personal estate to the extent of £21,140, being the amount provided by the wife out of her own money as a maintenance fund for the children, upon the wife's abandoning all claim to the rest of her father's residuary estate, valued at about £285,000, & agreeing to supplement the income of the maintenance fund for the benefit of the children as theretofore:—Held: there was no ground justifying the ct. in making a settlement in respect of the wife's father's residuary estate, for no injustice would be suffered by the wife within sect. 171 (1) (c), if each child's share of the property was allowed to devolve as on an intestacy on his or her death, nor ought the trusts to be altered under sect. 171 (1) (b); but as the Crown did not oppose a settlement of the marriage settlement funds, orders would be made for settlements of the two children's shares so as to give the wife a general power of disposal over the funds. The provision of the maintenance fund of £21,400 did not afford a ground for directing settlements under sect. 171, but the wife would remain free to apply for recoupment under Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 117, if so advised.

An application for a settlement was made by a widow, aged eighty-one years, & first cousin of the patient, who was sixty-two years of age. The only other near relatives of the patient were two first cousins, who were born in 1847 & 1850 respectively & who were & always had been resident in South America. Appct. stated that by reason of her own great age & that of her two cousins in South America any settlement which the ct. might be pleased to direct would not be of any material benefit to the patient's next of kin, unless its scope were extended to include children of any deceased first cousins of the patient's mother:—Held: there was no sufficient ground shown for directing a settlement to be made.

A patient had made a will in 1887, by which he had disposed of his residuary estate equally between his wife & children as a class. The wife had since died, as had also one of patient's sons, leaving issue. The patient's family were desirous that the deceased son's issue should be in no worse position than they would have been if their father had survived the patient:—Held: the case was a proper one for the exercise by the ct. of its discretion under sect. 171, by directing a settlement.

The property of a patient was derived under the will of his maternal grandfather. It had been settled by the patient's mother on her marriage with his father, whom she had divorced in 1877, & who had not since been heard of. The object of an application for a settlement was to exclude any claim by the father or his family:—Held: a settlement ought to be directed.

A patient had made a will in 1922, leaving the whole of his property to his wife, & in 1925 became of unsound mind. The will had been lost. On an application by the wife for a settlement, evidence was produced which satisfied the ct. as to the fact of the loss & as to the contents of the will:—Held: a settlement carrying out the terms of the will ought to be directed.—*Re GREENE, Re WHITWORTH, Re E. - 1378a. ———.]—On May 26, 1927, the receiver of a lunatic’s estate, who had been authorised to continue the lunatic’s business, obtained an order from the master directing him to distribute £1,800 amongst certain scheduled creditors of the business whose debts had been incurred subsequently to the date of the receivership order. The scheduled creditors were not parties to the order. On May 29, three days after the order was pronounced & before it was completed, the lunatic died. The order was subsequently completed on June 14. In July the exors.

of the lunatic’s will applied for an order for payment out of ct. to them of the fund representing the lunatic’s residuary estate, & on July 28 the master refused to make the order except upon the terms of effect being given to the order of May 26. Subsequently to the making of this order an order was made for the administration of the lunatic’s estate:—Held: (1) the order of May 26 was a mere direction to the receiver to make the payments in question which might have been varied or rescinded at any time by the master before it was finally completed, & it gave the creditors no equitable charge on the £1,000 thereby ordered to be distributed among them; (2) the jurisdiction in lunacy ceased on the death of the lunatic, & the master had no jurisdiction to direct that effect should be given to the order of May 26; (3) the exors. were entitled to the fund in ct. without regard to the order of May 26, but inasmuch as an order had since been made for the administration of the lunatic’s estate, the fund must be paid to the credit of the administration action.—Re WHEATER, [1928] Ch. 223; 97 L. 2310a. — Anthracosis.]—A platelayer employed by a railway co. worked in tunnels on an average of two days a week. From May 10 to Aug. 2, 1924, he was at work continuously in a long tunnel where a considerable amount of work was being done, & the full train service was running. On Aug. 2, he coughed up a lump of black stuff, & consulted a doctor, who, on Oct. 1, certified that he was suffering from anthracosis, a form of dust disease. He obtained light work as a gardener, but abandoned that on Oct. 9, 1925, & did no further work. No notice of any accident was given, nor was any claim made, until he commenced proceedings for an award some three years after he had given up work as a platelayer. The county ct. judge held applt. had not discharged the burden of proving that his past or present incapacity was due to injury by accident which arose out of or in the course of his employment by resps.:—Held: the judge was bound in law to come to the conclusion to which he did, & there was no misdirection.—*COLE v. 2317a. Workman with heart disease—Death from strain.—A workman, employed in a mine, exerted himself in the ordinary course of his employment in lifting & replacing the wheels of a tub which had left the rails. He immediately complained of pain. He went to work the following day, & on his way home fell dead. Death was due to the bursting of the right auricle, owing to the walls of the heart having steadily become thinner over a period of years. Medical evidence was given to the effect that the strain of lifting would tend to make the workman's condition more critical & so lead to the collapse. The county ct. judge held the workman's death was caused by an accident, & he awarded compensation :—Held : it was a question of fact, as to which there was evidence to support the finding.—FLANAGAN v. ACKERS WHITLEY & Co. (1926), 19 B. W. C. C. 399, C. A.

2317b. ———.]—A stevedore, who for many years had done his work without ailing, while employed unloading a ship had to fill a tub with iron ore, & at a certain point in the transit of the tub to deflect it so as to allow it to clear an obstacle. While pulling the tub into the right position he suddenly said "Oh!" & ceased work for a moment, but, recovering, put some iron ore into the tub, when he again felt ill & stopped. He lay down, & within half an hour from his saying "Oh!" was dead. On a post mortem examination it was found that he suffered from coronary disease of the heart, which sooner or later would have caused death :—Held : death resulted from a strain incurred in the ordinary exercise of the man's work, & this amounted to an accident, as to establish an accident it was not necessary to find a sudden or special strain, & an award should be made in favour of the dependant.—McFARLANE v. HUTTON BROTHERS (STEVEDORES), LTD. (1926), 96 L. J. K. B. 357; 136 L. T. 547; 20 B. W. C. C. 222, C. A.

2331a. ———.]—A workman, employed as a ripper, was subject to the disease of osteoperiostitis, rendering his bones brittle & even liable to a spontaneous fracture, but he was able to do his work, & in 1919, by an accident whilst so employed, suffered a fracture of his right femur. He received compensation, but in 1920 resumed work, & continued so to work until 1924, when the seam on which he was employed was shut down & he ceased to work. In Aug. 1925, he was out for a walk, & after walking two or three miles & while standing still his right tibia suddenly snapped, & he claimed compensation for the injury, on the ground that it was attributable to the accident suffered by him in 1919. The medical theory advanced was that, after the injury suffered from the accident in 1919, the muscles of the leg became inelastic, & if he slipped his power of recovering himself would be affected. There was no evidence that he did slip when the tibia snapped in Aug. 1925. The county ct. judge held the injury was due to the first accident in 1919, & awarded compensation :—Held : there was no evidence to support the finding, & the award must be set aside.—WERRIN v. 2342a. ———.]—A dock labourer was employed to load cargo into a steamer in a dock. He could have reached the shed where he worked by a provided route over a metalled road, but as this was a long way round he took a shorter cut, which involved his crossing a number of railway lines on the level, & while doing so was knocked down & killed by a light engine. The county ct. judge found that deceased could have used the provided way through the docks, but as he did not do so, but used an unauthorised route, albeit one commonly used to the knowledge & with the implied permission of the co.'s officials by a large number of workmen, & as at the time when the accident happened he was not doing anything which he was under any obligation to do, the accident did not arise in the course of the employment :—Held : this was a misdirection. On the facts, the workman was on the employers' premises, proceeding to work over an accustomed & permitted, though not a provided, route, & the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment.—HOWELLS v. 2488a. Riding on engine.]—The duty of C., a workman in the employ of the S. Railway, required him to go from point A. to point B. on their premises. Instead of going by a public road he proceeded to walk along the permanent way, a shorter route, in disregard of an emphatic prohibition. It was a common practice, acquiesced in by the railway's responsible officers, though forbidden by their rules, for workmen passing between A. & B. to travel on an engine if one happened to be running at a convenient time. When C. had walked about three-quarters of the distance along the line an engine going in the same direction passed him at a low speed, & to save himself the trouble of completing the journey on foot, he attempted to mount the engine in motion, with the result that he was seriously & permanently injured. The county ct. judge found that, although the prohibition was a very real one, C. was entitled to compensation, as he was acting "for the purposes of & in connection with" the railway's business within Workmen's Compensation Act, 192' (c. 84), s. 1 (2) :—Held : the above sub-sect. did not extend compensation to workmen who were not in their employment at all, & as C. in going into a definitely prohibited area, had gone outside his sphere of employment, he could not recover.—*CLARKE v. 2492a. ———.]—Some miners had been conveyed from their work at the face to the shaft in a train of tubs provided by the employers. Some conveyance was necessary in order to enable the men to leave the pit within the limit of seven hours permitted for each shift. Subsequently the employers provided a "spake," i.e., a train of special vehicles containing seats. On the occasion of the accident the driver in charge of the spake, for some purpose of his own, did what he had sometimes done before, namely, instead of using the spake used a train of tubs for conveying the miners, who knew that riding on tubs was prohibited, but did not complain. The train of tubs broke & overturned, & two of the miners were killed, & one was slightly injured :—Held : the prohibition was of the class that dealt with conduct within the sphere of the employment, & Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 1 (2), applied. It was necessary for the employers that the men should leave within a specified time, & the act was done for the purposes of the employers' trade or business, & compensation should be awarded to the dependants of the two miners who were killed, but not to the slightly injured miner, who was, for that reason, not covered by sect. 1 (2).—EDWARDS v. GWAUNCAEGURWEN COLLIERY CO., JAMES v. SAME, JENKINS v. SAME (1926), 96 L. J. K. B. 337; 136 L. T. 494; 20 B. W. C. C. 75, C. A.

2494a. ———.]—A shunter was employed to accompany a short train & to get down to open gates, through which the train had to pass, & also to do the necessary shunting. He should have ridden in the front waggon, but used to ride by means of his coupling stick on the buffer so as to enable him to get off & on more easily. Whilst so engaged the train went over a stone & jolted him off, & the injury he received resulted in the loss of a leg. Riding on a waggon by means of a coupling pole was prohibited:—Held: the prohibition was not one defining the sphere of the man's employment, though the breach of it, apart from Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 1 (2), would have prevented the accident arising out of the employment. There was evidence to support the finding of the county ct. judge that the act done was for the purposes of & in connection with the employers' trade or business, & the accident, by sect. 1 (2), was to be deemed to arise out of the employment.—*JAMES v. 2506a. ————.]—S., a stoneman, was employed by resps. driving a drift through rock by shotfiring & was found dead within three yards of the working face, his body being very badly damaged & his left arm practically blown off, he being a left-handed man. The drill & ratchet were found burnt, broken, & twisted a few yards from the working face, & the standard some way from the face & undamaged. The drill & ratchet together with the standard were used for drilling holes to put the shots in, but if a shot misfired & the stemming was drilled out the standard was not used. S. was a licensed shot firer, & his duty would be to deal with the case of a misfire, but the use of a hole in which a shot had misfired was prohibited, as also the drilling out of it the stemming in order to put in another charge, it being directed that a fresh hole must be bored not less than a foot from the old hole. There was no evidence that there had been any attempt to drill a fresh hole. The county ct. judge held the man was killed whilst doing a prohibited act, but, as his motive was to save himself the trouble of drilling a fresh hole, he was not at the time of the accident doing an act for the purposes of & in connection with the employers' trade or business within Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 1 (2), & his dependant was not entitled to recover compensation:—Held: the personal motive of the man in doing the prohibited act was not a criterion as to whether he was doing it for the purposes of & in connection with the employers' trade or business, & as the man was engaged at the working face within the sphere of his employment he must be deemed to have acted for the purposes of & in connection with the employers' trade or business, & though doing a prohibited act, he was brought back within sect. 1 (1), & compensation was payable as for an accident arising out of & in the course of the employment.—*STOKOE v. There was an express order to the workmen not to enter the completed cubicles. The cubicles being worked upon were quite close to those finished, being in the same series. The workman, a very competent man at his job, was very short-sighted, & was found electrocuted in one of the completed cubicles, he having unlocked the others. The county ct. judge drew the inference that the workman had entered a completed cubicle by mistake, & was there for the purposes of his employers' trade or business, & that the accident arose out of & in the course of his employment:—Held: there was evidence to support this inference of fact, & although the workman was acting contrary to a prohibition, the 2552a. Drowned when using boat not provided by employer.—Five sailors got leave to go on shore. The bo'sun said that they were not bound to be back in the ship until 6.15 a.m. A launch had been provided to take the sailors on leave to the shore & back again, & the captain told the men that the last journey to the ship by the launch would be made at 8 p.m., & that if they came back later than that, they would have to find some other means of returning to the ship. The men desired to enjoy their leave till later than 8 p.m., & tried to arrange with the man who worked the launch to come for them at 10 p.m., offering to pay him 2s. each, but the launch never came for them at 10 p.m., so they got into the first boat handy, a dinghy, & borrowed a scull with which they propelled the dinghy from the stern. The dinghy, though the men were unaware of it, was rotten & sank, the result being that three of the five men were drowned:—Held: there was no contractual obligation on the deceased men to return to their ship by the boat they used, which was not provided by the employers, & as no such duty was on the men to use that boat, the accident by which they lost their lives was not in the course of performing some duty arising out of their contract of service, or, in other words, in the course of their employment.—*ROBERTSON v. 2552b. Standing up in boat to take hold of gangway—Boat sinking.—M. & W. were members of the crew of a ship lying in a river about twenty-five feet from the wharf. The ship provided no boat for the purpose of going to or from the shore. A game of football was being played on shore, at which the captain & some of the officers were present & in which M. took part. On returning to the wharf after the game M. hailed W., who got into a canoe at the foot of the gangway & fetched M. When M. got up to take hold of the gangway, the canoe filled, & both men were drowned. The county ct. judge held the accident was occasioned by a reasonable attempt to get hold of the gangway, & such attempt involved more than an ordinary risk of navigation to which any passenger would be exposed, & was an act specifically connected with his employment on the ship, & he made an award in favour of the dependants in both cases, on the ground that both men had been drowned in an accident arising out of & in the course of their employment:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding.—MORRISON

Deceased, having gone to sleep, got out of the train whilst it was in motion leaving K. & slipped on the platform as he landed, fell heavily on his back, his head striking the platform violently, & died of the injuries received:—Held: though deceased was in the course of his employment whilst travelling in the train, he was committing an illegal act in getting out of the train while in motion, & was doing an act which did not arise out of the employment, but under the above sect. it must be deemed to arise out of & in the course of the employment as having been done in pursuance of & for the purposes of the employers' trade or business, & the act done was not so contrary to law as to put the man wholly outside the sphere of the employment, & his widow was entitled to compensation.—*ALTOBELLI v. The county ct. judge dismissed the application, finding that though the assault was an accident, it was not one of the risks of appct.'s employment that he should be assaulted, & it was not the result of doing anything of service to his employer, & it was not an accident arising out of the employment:—Held: the decision was right, as there was evidence upon which the judge could support his decision, & no misdirection.—*LEE v. On Nov. 9, 1926, at 10.30 a.m., whilst so employed, she noticed that her right thumb was bleeding, but was not sure how the scratch which caused the bleeding had occurred, & she had not felt pain. She inferred that she must have knocked it at the time on a rough bit of wood at the side of the sink or on the edge of a cork box. She applied iodine, but as the bleeding did not stop she went to the assistant, who bandaged her thumb, & she continued at work until 11.30, when she went to one of the partners, who dressed the wound. On Nov. 16 she felt too unwell to go to work, & subsequently was in the infirmary until Jan. 18, 1927, suffering from septic poisoning:—Held: (1) there were sufficient facts proved before the county ct. judge to enable him to draw an inference one way or the other, so that there was no necessity for surmise, conjecture, or guess; (2) the employers had had knowledge of the accident, & notice was not necessary.—*GILL v. His condition was such that he was liable to collapse or sudden death at any moment. He went down the mine at 10.30 p.m., & was alive & well at 3 o'clock. At 4 o'clock he was found dead in his stall, lying back as though asleep. There was no evidence of any fall of roof, & he had no pick in his hand. He was alone at the time of his death, & there was no evidence of what the man was actually doing:—Held: there was no evidence that the man's death was caused by any strain at work, & no evidence that death resulted from any injury by accident arising out of the employment.—*MUSCROFT v. 2849a. Contents—All injuries need not be specified.
—The mere fact that notice has to be given does not imply that all injuries must be specified.

A workman gave notice of an accident, in which he complained of injury to his ribs, & his employers paid him compensation. He returned to work after two months. He then began to suffer with his hip, & eventually had to cease work on that account. His employers resisted a second claim for compensation, on the ground that no injury to the hip was specified in the notice of the accident. The county ct. judge found that the injury to the hip was due to the original accident, that the employers had not been prejudiced by any failure to mention the hip in the notice of accident, as they had paid compensation to the workman after an examination by their own doctor :—Held : there was evidence to support the findings, & no misdirection.—*WILES v. The county ct. judge found that notice of the accident had not been given as soon as practicable, & that the employers were prejudiced by the want of notice :—Held : it was a question of fact, as to which there was evidence to support the finding.—*EVANS v. 2968a. — — — — —.]—An injured workman was treated in hospital by a consultant of the hospital. She returned to work, but ceased work again owing to the injury. She was then requested by her employers to submit to an examination by the same consultant acting as their medical adviser. She refused, on the ground that he would be a necessary witness on her behalf in any arbn. proceedings. The employers applied for suspension of weekly payments until the examination had taken place. The county ct. judge granted the application, on the ground that the reason given for the refusal was itself unreasonable :—Held : to find that the refusal was unreasonable merely because the workman objected to being examined, at the instance of the employer, by a consultant at the hospital at which she had been treated, was not sufficient. The matter must be further inquired into to ascertain (1) whether this consultant was the only medical adviser available to the workman, & (2) whether the woman's case, if it went to arbn., would be imperilled by reference to this particular consultant.—*TELEPHONE MANUFACTURING Co., LTD. v. 3031a. —.]—On Apr. 16, 1926, a workman fell & injured his knee. He was paid full wages, although incapacitated, until Sept. 3, when he was summarily dismissed from employment for misconduct. In the hope of being reinstated, he threatened to bring an action for wrongful dismissal, but made no claim under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), until two days after the statutory six months had expired. The county ct. judge found that the workman never intended to claim within the necessary period of six months, & there was no reasonable cause for the delay, & he refused to award compensation:—Held: the evidence supported the findings, & there was no misdirection.

When the workman knows that the injury he suffers from was occasioned by an accident giving him a right to compensation, & fails to make a claim within six months, if that failure was prompted by his own interests, & was not induced by any action of the employer which would lead him to believe he could get compensation without making a claim, he shows no reasonable cause (SCRUTTON, L.J.).—DREWITT v. BRITANNIC ASSURANCE CO., LTD. (1927), 137 L. T. 511; 20 B. W. C. C. 434, C. A.

3033a. Expectation of compensation without necessity of making claim.—In Apr. 1925, a chef severed the ligaments of his right hand in handling a dish which broke, but he continued his work at his full wages. His employers knew of the accident, but were not aware the chef could not do his full work. In July, 1926, he was dismissed, & in that month made a claim for compensation. The county ct. judge found that the workman did not refrain from making a claim because he formed the view that he would receive compensation should incapacity supervene in the future without the necessity of making a claim, & that the employers did nothing to encourage such a view, & there was no reasonable cause for not making the claim within six months of the accident:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings, & no misdirection.

There would be reasonable cause for not making a claim within six months, if the workman could prove that there was a tacit understanding that the employers knew all about the possibility of a claim & were prepared to give him compensation, even though his claim might fall outside the six months (LORD HANWORTH, M.R.).—*SOYER v. 3056a. —.]—Appct. was in receipt of a weekly payment on account of injuries received in the course of his employment. The employers gave notice of termination of the weekly payment, on the ground of recovery as certified by their doctor. The workman replied with a counter-certificate of his doctor. The matter was submitted to the medical referee, who certified that the man was fit for most forms of work. The employers ceased making the weekly payments, & the workman appealed to the county ct. judge as to the effect of the certificate. The judge, sitting with the same medical referee as assessor, who explained his certificate as being one of complete recovery, held the man was fit for work on the date when compensation ceased, but awarded compensation from the date of cessation of the weekly payment to the date of his award:—Held: (1) compensation was not payable after incapacity had ceased; (2) the certificate of the medical referee was sufficient & conclusive.—PULLEN v. ENTHOVEN & SON (1927), 20 B. W. C. C. 248, C. A.

3056b. —.]—In a reference to a medical referee made under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 19 (2), the medical referee certified that the workman was fit to resume his ordinary occupation, but described it as being something different from what in fact it had previously been. The county ct. judge refused to treat the certificate as conclusive, & received evidence as to the nature of the respective occupations, the parties having objected to the certificate being sent back to the medical referee for explanation or correction:—Held: the certificate being ambiguous was not conclusive, & the parties having refused the opportunity of the ambiguity being explained by the medical referee, the judge was entitled to hear the evidence tendered & act upon it.—*AUSTIN v. 3098a. — —.]—An infant workman lost his left arm below the elbow as a result of an accident. The employers admitted liability, & paid full compensation. On Nov. 5, 1926, the workman signed a receipt for payments in the form of an agreement, by which he agreed that the payments were to be continued only so long as he was totally disabled, but that the amount of payment in respect of any subsequent partial incapacity should be settled if & when the question arose. In Jan. 1927, he applied for registration of an agreement in the terms of Form 24, that the weekly payments should continue during partial or total incapacity or until the same should be ended or diminished in accordance with 1925 Act. The employers objected to that agreement being recorded, on the ground that the terms of the real agreement of Nov. 5, 1926, were not therein correctly stated, & thereupon the workman filed a request for arbn. on Feb. 23, 1927. The boy obtained work as a messenger boy on Feb. 11, 1927. The county ct. judge ordered the document of Nov. 5 to be recorded as the agreement between the parties, & dismissed the request for arbn.:—Held: a totally incapacitated workman in receipt of full compensation under an admission of liability was entitled, either to a recorded memorandum of agreement stating his rights in the terms of Form 24, or, if the employers objected to that, he was entitled, on the question so raised, to apply in arbn. proceedings for the judge to grant an award in such terms; the document of Nov. 5 did not give the workman his full rights as expressed in Form 24, & was not binding on the workman, being an infant, & when the employers objected to the recording of a memorandum in the terms of Form 24 a question was raised fit for arbn., & an award should have been made having regard to the terms of Form 24, & there was no power on the proceedings to order a memorandum of agreement to be recorded, & the case must be remitted for the proper award to be made to suit the circumstances of the workman having actually returned to work.—*PARKER v. While so working he was injured by an accident. The county ct. judge said that he did not accept the evidence which had been given as to the inability of the workman to do the full work of a contractor, & refused compensation:—Held: it was a question of fact, as to which there was evidence to support the finding, & no misdirection.—*JONES v. He claimed compensation as for total incapacity, with a declaration of liability. 3227a. ————.]—A workman suffered an injury to his finger by an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment, with the result that the finger had to be amputated. Compensation was paid, but was determined upon the certificate of the employer's doctor that the workman was no longer incapacitated. In proceedings instituted by the workman medical evidence was given on his behalf that his grip was weakened, that the muscles were still tender, & that he was still partially incapacitated. The doctor called on behalf of the employers agreed that the grip was weak, but stated that the workman was capable of doing some work which would be beneficial. The county ct. judge found that the workman had fully recovered, & made a declaration of liability only:—Held: there was no evidence to support the finding, & the case must be remitted for compensation to be assessed.—*BUCK v. 3243b. ———.]—A coal miner, who had worked for many years underground, became, by reason of an attack of nystagmus, only able to do surface work at a lower wage. This work was unavailable, owing to the state of the labour market, though the workman, but for the nystagmus, would probably have been able to obtain employment underground:—Held: the effect of Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 (c. 43), s. 16, which was re-enacted as Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 9 (4), was necessarily to exclude the idea that the words "able to earn" in Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906 (c. 58), Sched. I., applied to any circumstances not personal to the workman himself. It dealt expressly with the case of the man who could not find work, & it set the criterion whether the failure to find work was due wholly or mainly to the accident, but failure to find work due solely to the state of the labour market was expressly excluded by the sect., & it was impossible to say that *Cardiff Corpn. v. 3274a. ———.]—A workman, whose left eye was defective, suffered, in 1919, an injury to his right eye while working as a miner, for which compensation was received until the beginning of 1924, when he was given work underground. This was found to be unsuitable, & he was given surface work on the screens, & was paid compensation for partial incapacity. He left this work at the commencement of the stoppage due to a dispute in the coal trade in 1926, but was not re-employed at the conclusion of the stoppage, in Dec. 1926. In Feb. 1927, the workman applied to have his compensation increased, on the ground that the work on which he had been employed was a special kind of surface work found for him by his employers. The county ct. judge held resps. were not liable to pay compensation as claimed on the grounds set out in their particulars. The particulars referred to in resps. answer contained the allegation that the workman was not incapacitated from doing ordinary surface work:—Held: the award must be taken to mean that the judge had found as a fact that the workman was capable of doing ordinary surface work, & there was evidence to support such a finding.—CUSHION v. TREDEGAR IRON & COAL CO., LTD. (1927), 20 B. W. C. C. 454, C. A.

He subsequently returned to work at the face, but in June, 1924, had another accident through which his left eye was injured, & he was paid compensation. In Mar. 1925, he returned to light work, receiving also a weekly sum by way of compensation. On July 1, 1925, the employers applied for a review & termination of the weekly payments. The workman stated in evidence that he was afraid to work below ground again, & the county ct. judge held work at the coal face was not suitable, & the man's refusal to do it was reasonable:—Held: the case must go back for the judge to decide whether the unsuitability of the work resulted from the first accident or the second, or both, & to assess the compensation payable only in regard to incapacity from the second accident.—*ASTON COAL CO., LTD. v. 3315a. ———.]—A workman was employed as a seaman on a fishing-boat at £3 a week. On Feb. 11, 1926, his finger was cut by a rope, & he was paid compensation until July 2, when he was certified fit for light work. He then obtained a situation on a trawler, until Sept., payment being on a profit-sharing basis, & his share of the profits being £21. He next worked on another trawler until Feb. 1927, payment being on the same basis, but there were no profits. On Nov. 5, 1926, he filed a request for arbn. claiming half the difference between his pre-accident wages & what he was able to earn on the trawlers on the profit-sharing basis. The county ct. judge assessed his weekly earning capacity since July 2, 1926, at £2 5s., & awarded him a week compensation:—Held: (1) there was no evidence that the workman suffered any loss of earnings by reason of his injury, & no evidence to support the award; (2) the workman had not discharged the onus of showing a reasonable probability that incapacity would ensue in the future, & was not entitled to a declaration of liability. —*McLEOD v. 3359a. How calculated—Period of calculation—Posthumous child.—A workman having been killed by accident arising out of his employment, his widow claimed compensation for herself & her posthumous child born some ten weeks after the workman's death. The employers paid a sum of money into ct. in respect of the child's allowance based on 15 per cent. of £2 a week for 780 weeks or fifteen years:—Held: the child was entitled to a sum calculated by taking 15 per cent. of £2 a week over a period from the death of the workman to the date when the child in fact would attain the age of fifteen, which, in this case, was some ten weeks more than fifteen years.—*ATHEY v. 3359b. Amount of lump sum.—A workman died as the result of an accident, having previously received from his employers £65 5s. 5d. in weekly payments as compensation. On his death his employers paid into ct. £534 14s. 7d., made up of £234 14s. 7d., i.e., £300 less £65 5s. 5d., for the lump sum payable to the widow, & £300 for children's allowance. The total amount to which the children would have been entitled, if not limited in any way, was calculated to be £617 14s. The county ct. judge decided that the amount paid in was reasonable &, at the request of the widow, made an order for payment out of part of the amount:—Held: (1) the amount paid into ct. by the employers was insufficient, & the dependants were entitled to the full £600, since if the lump sum calculated under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 8 (2), was reduced below £300, then, if the figures warranted it, the children's allowance under sect. 8 (3) might exceed £300, provided that the lump sum & the children's allowance together did not exceed £600; (2) the widow was not deprived of her right of appeal by having accepted payment of part of the amount paid in, because, although she might have approbated the order on her own behalf, she had reprobated it in the interests of her children. (3) Semble: a request for arbn., & not an appeal, was the proper procedure for the widow.—MALCOLM v. BARBER, WALKER & Co., LTD. (1927), 137 L. T. 470; 20 B. W. C. C. 516, C. A.

3359c. — One child over fifteen partially dependent.]—A workman died as a result of an accident leaving a widow & two children under fifteen all wholly dependent, & also one daughter over fifteen partially dependent. The county ct. judge held the presence of the daughter over fifteen, only partially dependent, required ~~him~~ to calculate the children's allowance on the basis of partial dependency:—Held: the children's allowance must be calculated on the basis of their being wholly dependent, & the existence of another member of the family over fifteen, who happened to be only partially dependent, did not affect the calculation.—*GREEN v. Under this agreement he agreed to obey the orders of the society & perform all his duties in accordance with official instructions. He was to be paid a weekly salary calculated on a percentage basis. The workman suffered an accident in the course of his employment as a fitter. The county ct. judge, in order to compute his average weekly earnings, added together the weekly payments received from both sources. The employers appealed on the ground that the relationship between

The workman applied for 30s. to be continued. The employers in their answer submitted to an award of 10s. a week to continue. The county ct. judge found that the man was able to do his full work on May 5, 1927, but ordered that compensation should be paid at 30s. up to July 4, 1927, & then terminate altogether:—Held: the award was inconsequent, & the Order giving liberty to apply.—Employers having paid a workman full compensation for some months for an accident in their employment, applied for a review of the weekly payment & for termination, but offered to accept a declaration of liability. He also ordered the employers to pay the costs:—Held: (1) the order was a right order, as liberty to apply carried out the effect of a declaration of liability; (2) the employers having failed to establish their right to termination of the weekly payments, the judge rightly exercised his discretion in ordering that the employers should pay the costs.—*SIDNEY LEE (EXETER), LTD. v. 3559a. —.]—A workman having been injured, the employers entered into an agreement with him, which was duly recorded. This agreement gave the workman 30s. a week for total or partial incapacity "or until same shall be ended, diminished, increased or redeemed." Later the workman returned to work at his old wages, on the express agreement contained in correspondence that his rights under the registered agreement were kept alive, & that if the work was not continued & old wages paid, he should go back to such rights. As he was able to continue at work, the employers applied for a review to diminish or terminate the payments payable under the registered agreement. The workman claimed that he had not been paid his full old rate of wages under the second agreement & was entitled to have them made up to the old rate, & further, that by reason of this agreement the employers had no power to review the payments payable under the registered agreement. The county ct. judge held the employers' application to review was in breach of the agreement in the correspondence, & dismissed the application:—Held: the employers had expressly reserved their rights under the registered agreement to have the weekly payment reviewed. The workman's attempt at work having been successful, the employers' application to review was a proper one, & the judge was wrong in dismissing it. The right order on the facts was to discharge the registered agreement & direct a declaration of liability to be recorded.—HITCHENS & Co., LTD. v. HART (1927), 20 B. W. C. C. 609, C. A.

571a. Consideration for agreement—Sufficiency.—An underground colliery workman left his employment in Mar. 1921, on account of illness. On July 18, 1922, he was certified to be suffering from nystagmus, the disablement, according to the certificate, being deemed to commence on that day. The workman applied for compensation, & the employers paid full compensation for total incapacity for four years, & then ceased payment. In proceedings for an award, instituted by the workman, the case was treated by both parties on the basis of an agreement to pay compensation as for total incapacity having been made, but the county

ct. judge held there had been no consideration on the part of the workman for the agreement, & as the workman was not entitled to any compensation since he had not been employed by resps. during twelve months prior to the date of the certificate, the agreement was outside Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), & could not give jurisdiction within the Act:—Held: there had been good consideration, inasmuch as the workman had forborne to take steps, either by applying to the certifying surgeon, or by appeal to the medical referee, to get the date of the certificate of disablement altered, & the agreement was binding upon resps., & the workman was entitled to an award.—*REES v. No counter-certificate by the workman's doctor was served in pursuance of the sect., but the workman filed a request for arbn. The county ct. judge awarded 8s. a week on the basis of partial incapacity from the date of the hearing in the county ct., & not from the date of termination of the weekly payment, on the ground that the workman had not complied with sect. 14, & was not entitled to compensation from that date:—Held: the notice was bad, in that it purported to end compensation when the workman was certified to be partially recovered only, & the compensation of 8s. a week for partial incapacity was payable

The workman filed a request for arbn. claiming (inter alia) a declaration of liability, alleging that he was still incapacitated. Resps. offered to accept an award of a declaration of liability, & before the hearing offered the sum by which the weekly payments fell short of the proper amount that was due in respect of the two days. The county ct. judge was satisfied the workman had recovered & was able to do his work, & held, payment for the two days having been offered, there was no further liability on resps., & made the declaration of liability offered:—Held: the notice was good, & was not invalidated because the payments were not made for the full period of ten days from the date thereof.—*COOPER v. After the employers had commenced proceedings for a review, the workman admitted that the incapacity had ceased on Sept. 3, but claimed compensation up to the date of the award:—Held: the county ct. judge had no jurisdiction under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 (c. 42), s. 14, to award any payment after the incapacity had ceased, & he ought to make a retrospective award terminating the weekly payments as from the date of recovery.—*OCEAN COAL CO. v. The workman filed an application claiming compensation at the old rate, & the employers filed a counter-application for termination of compensation. The county ct. judge found that the workman had entirely recovered on Sept. 20, 1926, & that the swelling from which he suffered at the date of the trial was not a result of the accident, & made an award for the employers on both applications:—Held: the employers, by paying compensation, were not estopped from saying that the injury was not caused by the accident, & there was evidence to support the judge's findings, & no misdirection.—*THORPE v. The workman did not obtain a counter-certificate, but, on Nov. 24, his solrs. wrote suggesting that he had not been examined for hernia, that an operation would be necessary, & that the notice of Nov. 2 should be cancelled. The employers thereupon requested the workman to present himself for further examinations, & as a result of these examinations again repudiated liability to pay compensation. The county ct. judge found that there was no incapacity on Jan. 7, 1928, but he made an award of compensation for eight weeks from Nov. 12, 1927, on the ground that compensation was not properly terminated on that date, in that the employers by subjecting the workman to further examinations had shown that they did not

Ultimately a doctor reported that pltf. had recovered, & defts. stopped the payments & applied for a review thereof, & paid into ct., with a denial of liability, the amount of the weekly payments up to that date. While the county ct. proceedings were still pending, pltf. brought an action, alleging that he had not recovered from his injury, & claiming (1) a declaration that under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 12, defts. had committed a breach of their duty by stopping the payments otherwise than in pursuance of an agreement or arbn., & (2) an injunction restraining a continuance of the breach:—Held: under sect. 21 the only tribunal to determine the question of incapacity was the county ct., &, as that question had not yet been determined by that tribunal, pltf. could not show that his incapacity was continuing since the date when defts. stopped the weekly payments, & the action failed.—CARTON v. On the termination of the payments the workman, on the ground that his incapacity was still continuing, applied for an award of weekly compensation & for an interim award of weekly compensation until the question of the liability of his employers should be decided. The arbitrator made an interim award of a weekly payment, & authorised the employers to pay the money into ct. instead of paying it to the workman:—Held: under sect. 12 the workman was entitled to an interim award, & the arbitrator had no power to authorise the employers to pay the money due thereunder into ct. instead of paying it to the workman. —ANCHOR DONALDSON, LTD. v. Apart from that sect. the principle does not apply to cases under the Act, the provisions of Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906 (c. 58), Sched. I. When the unemployment benefit ceased he claimed full compensation, proving that he had made genuine attempts to obtain work but had failed owing to his injury. His decision on the point is not a decision on a question of law, & there is no appeal therefrom. Semble: such particulars ought to be sparingly ordered, & not with the object of compelling the county ct. judge to give costs to one side or the other, & there is much greater reason for asking for particulars of the extent of diminution of a weekly payment where termination is not asked for, than where the employer is asking for termination or diminution.—VICKERS, LTD. v. while working for different employers. The medical referee issued a certificate on Jan. 30, 1928, in which he certified that on Jan. 30, 1928, appct. was no longer disabled by dermatitis. On Mar. 10, 1928, appct. was examined by the certifying surgeon, who on that date certified that she was suffering from dermatitis & had been disabled thereby since Sept. 29, 1927. On a claim by the workman for compensation based on the certifying surgeon's certificate of Mar. 10, 1928, the county ct. judge held the two certificates being inconsistent, the certificate of the medical referee must prevail to the effect that the workman was not disabled after Jan. 30, 1928:—Held: there was no vital inconsistency between the two certificates, bearing in mind the intermittent character of dermatitis, & the certificate of Mar. 10 was consistent with dermatitis having broken out again.—MACY v. Certificate incomplete—Death of certifying surgeon—Subsequent certificate by successor—Validity.]—On July 12, 1926, eighteen months after the workman had left his employment, Dr. S., the certifying surgeon of the district, certified that the workman was suffering from lead poisoning. The certificate did not comply with the regulations as no date of disablement was filled in, nor were the words "I certify that the disablement commenced on the day of " struck out. Before the workman could see Dr. S. to have the omission put right the doctor died. After Dr. F. had been appointed in his place the workman, on Aug. 12, 1926, obtained a certificate from him in which the date of disablement was filled in as Nov. 23, 1924. In answer to the workmen's request for arbn., based on Dr. F.'s certificate, the employers denied liability to pay compensation on the ground that, as Dr. S.'s certificate did not specify the date of disablement, such date was deemed to be the date of the certificate, & was final & conclusive, & Dr. F.'s certificate was accordingly invalid, & as the workman had not been in their employment for more than twelve months prior to that date of disablement, he could not recover compensation. The county ct. judge upheld that contention:—Held: the first certificate was incomplete in that it had not dealt with the date of disablement in either manner provided by the regulations & was invalid, & the workman, not being able by reason of the death of Dr. S. to have the matter put in order, was entitled to rely on the second certificate.—POWELL v. suffering from lead poisoning. A leading symptom of the disease was stated on the form to be dupuytren's contraction. Full compensation was paid until an application by the employers to review the weekly payments. The workman was still incapacitated by dupuytren's contraction. The county ct. judge refused to treat the certificate as conclusive as to dupuytren's contraction being a symptom of lead poisoning, & on contradictory medical evidence given at the hearing, & also on knowledge he had acquired some years before while sitting on a commission to consider industrial diseases, including dupuytren's contraction, held the symptoms, though still the same as those set out in the certificate, were not due to the certified disease, & reduced the compensation to 1*d.* a week. The case involved a point of law, & early in the hearing, counsel called attention to that fact, but the judge omitted to take any notes of the proceedings:—Held: (1) the certificate that the symptoms were due to the certified disease was conclusive, & evidence to the contrary was inadmissible, & there was no evidence of any new factor or new disease to support an award in reduction of compensation. 3821b. As to cause of death or incapacity.—A workman, employed as a painter, was from July to Sept. 1927, laid up with an ulcer on his ankle & with heart trouble. From Oct. 19 onwards he became unfit for further work with loss of power in his left arm & leg, he became mentally incapable, his memory failed, & his heart got worse. On Nov. 15 he was admitted to hospital, where the medical superintendent found that he had long-standing disease of the heart caused by kidney trouble. On Nov. 23, the certifying surgeon visited the hospital, & on Nov. 28 certified that the workman was suffering from lead poisoning or its sequelæ, & had been disabled as from Oct. 19. The medical superintendent was ignorant both of the visit & of the certificate of the certifying surgeon, & when the workman died on Dec. 23, certified that the cause of death was cerebral hæmorrhage caused by valvular disease of the heart. The county ct. judge held he was not bound to find that death was due to the disease certified by the certifying surgeon, & refused to make an award in favour of the dependants, on the ground that they had not discharged the onus of proving that lead poisoning either caused, contributed to, or accelerated death:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding, & no misdirection.—YOUNG v. KEEBLE, LTD. (1928), 21 B. W. C. C. 294, C. A.

3821c. —.]—An odd job man in spinning mills was certified as suffering from epitheliomatous ulceration of the skin due to mineral oil. He died five months later. The county ct. judge held the certificate of the certifying surgeon was conclusive & debarred him from hearing any evidence on behalf of the employers, which tended to show that he had not contracted the disease in their employment & that death did not result from the disease:—Held: the judge was not entitled to refuse to hear the evidence, & the case must be remitted for rehearing.—NEEDHAM v. ACE MILL, LTD. (1928), 21 B. W. C. C. 189, C. A.

3829a. What amounts to decision.—A medical referee, in his certificate, said that it was impossible for him to give a certificate either agreeing with or against that given by the certifying surgeon, as it was outside his province as an ophthalmic surgeon. The county ct. judge having held the certificate of the certifying surgeon was conclusive:—Held: there had been no decision by the medical referee, & the case must go back for the appointment of a fresh medical referee.—JONES v. 3860a. Effect of agreement for compensation—Facts as to agreement not presented in county court.—On an application for review & redemption of weekly payments a workman alleged that he had negotiated with persons representing a new co. which had taken over the business of his employers, & the new co. had agreed to pay him £650 in full settlement of his claims. The county ct. judge had previously decided in a similar case that the workman could not rely upon such an agreement with the new co., as such agreement was only with a third party, & not with his employers. The parties treated the case as governed by that decision, & the question of the agreement was not gone into at the hearing. The application was then proceeded with as an application for review & the judge held the workman had recovered, & by his award stopped further weekly payments. The workman appealed, on the ground that the judge could not terminate the payments in view of the agreement:—Held: (1) the ct. could not entertain an appeal as to the effect of the agreement, as the facts as to that agreement had not been presented in the county ct., & there were no materials before the ct. on which they could come to a decision; (2) the question whether the workman had recovered was a question of fact, as to which there was evidence to support the finding, & there was no misdirection.—EAST KENT COLLIERY Co. v. HEATH (1926), 20 B. W. C. C. 97, C. A.

- 445a. ———.]—Pltf. desired to be present at the first performance of a play at a theatre. He knew that, in consequence of his having made certain serious & unfounded charges against some members of the theatre staff, an application for a ticket in his own name would be refused. He therefore obtained a ticket through the agency of a friend, who bought the ticket at the theatre without disclosing that it was for pltf. By order of deft., the managing director of the theatre, pltf. was refused admission to the theatre on the night in question. Pltf. claimed damages from deft. for maliciously procuring the proprietors of the theatre to break a contract for the admission of pltf to the theatre, alleged to have been made by them with pltf. by the sale of the ticket:—Held: the non-disclosure of the fact that the ticket was bought for pltf. prevented the sale of the ticket from constituting a contract as alleged, the identity of pltf. being in the circumstances a material element in the formation of the contract, & the action failed.—*SAID v. In 1924 & 1926 B. made further advances to Mrs. J., who was the owner in fee, upon the same securities. Mrs. J. died in 1926. In Jan. 1927 her trustees applied for & were granted a further advance on the same securities by B., whose solrs. had attended to the previous transactions. The deed secured an immediate advance, & it also secured all the previous existing securities, although the old securities had been kept on foot for the purpose of preserving priorities, & there was a new proviso for redemption. B.'s solrs. carried in a bill for taxation, the charges being according to the scale in Sched. I., Part I., of the General Order under Solrs.' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), for "investigating title & preparing & completing deed of security." The taxing master took the view that Sched. I. did not apply, & taxed the bill accordingly :—Held : there had been an "investigation of title" within Sched. I., & the matter must be referred back to the taxing master.—Re COWARD, CHANCE & CO., [1928] Ch. 379 ; 97 L. J. Ch. 234 ; 139 L. T. 113 ; 72 Sol. Jo. 225.

- 59a. —.]—In Mar. 1926, defts. carried out demolition work on premises adjoining other premises, called X., under a limited licence given by the owners of premises X. One of the conditions of the licence was that defts. should make good all damage done to premises X. by reason of the demolition operations. In the course of the operations defts. allowed debris to drop on an inaccessible part of the roof of premises X. & did not remove all the debris therefrom when the demolition work was completed. In July pltf. became the occupier of premises X. under a lease. In Sept. a heavy storm of rain washed the debris which had been left by defts. on the roof of premises X. into the gutters on the roof, & a gully was choked & the basement of premises X. was flooded, & goods which pltf. kept there were damaged. In an action by pltf. claiming damages for defts.' negligence:—Held: there could be no negligence, as there was no duty on the part of defts. towards pltf.—KONSKIER v. 1654a. Death of partner sending notice before notice received—Date of dissolution of partnership.]—Where a partner sends by post a notice to the other partner to determine the partnership as from the date of the notice, & dies before the other partner receives the notice, the partnership is dissolved, not by the notice, but by the death of the partner sending it, inasmuch as the statutory dissolution by notice is not brought about until receipt of the notice. 727. For the existing paragraph substitute the following paragraph:—

Injunction to restrain acceptance — Lawful ground of objection—"Secret processes."]—

Where an injunction had been granted to restrain appct. for a patent from disclosing processes derived from pltf. co., or from doing any act which might cause same to become public or commonly known, & the Comptroller-General refused to undertake when he should receive an application for the acceptance of a complete specification to consider such injunction a "lawful ground of objection" to the acceptance of the complete specification within Patents & Designs Act, 1907 (c. 29), s. 7 (3), objecting to his duty prescribed by the Patent Acts being in any way interfered with by the ct., the ct. granted an injunction restraining the Comptroller-General from accepting the complete specification, as under sect. 9, on such acceptance, the matter would be thrown open to public inspection, the specification being concerned with some of the processes which, as between pltf. co. & appct., appct. had been restrained from disclosing, & because the Comptroller-General might accept the complete specification on the footing that the injunction against appct. would not constitute a lawful ground of objection within sect. 7 (3). On appeal the S.-G. on behalf of the Comptroller-General undertook that the injunction granted against appct. would be properly considered in deciding whether the specification should be accepted as being something which might constitute "a lawful ground of objection" to such acceptance, & by consent the order against the Comptroller-General was discharged, notice of discontinuance to be served upon him. Appct. was also further restrained from proceeding with his application in addition to the injunction granted against him in the ct. below.—*REX CO. & REX RESEARCH CORPN. v. The true effect of sect. 8 is to give merely a right of compensation to the patentee against the Crown for the use by its officers of his invention for the purposes of the Crown, & it does not give any right in itself to sue the department concerned.

(2) A claim for a declaration of the validity of the patent is not a claim in tort because the Crown has the right to use the patent on the statutory terms set out in sect. 8.

- 66a. ——— Survivor of Queen Victoria's descendants living.]—By his will dated June 14, 1921, & confirmed by a codicil of Feb. 2, 1926, testator, who died on Sept. 6, 1926, gave his property to his trustees upon certain trusts as to income & capital for his participating issue as therein defined, using a well known common form so as to tie it up in such a way that the capital was not to vest until the expiration of "the period ending at the expiration of twenty years from the day of the death of the last survivor of all the lineal descendants of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria who shall be living at the time of my death" :—Held : though the existing lives selected were very numerous & it would be extremely difficult & expensive in the future to ascertain the date of the survivor's death, it could not be said to be so impracticable or beyond the scope of the ordinary legal testimony probably then available as to avoid the trust ab initio for uncertainty or perpetuity, & the trust was valid.—Re VILLAR, PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. 652a. — Commencement during twenty-one years from testator's death.—Testator, who died in 1893, gave his net residue, subject to certain life annuities which did not exhaust the income, in trust for a bachelor's children who should attain twenty-one with a gift over in default. On Mar. 11, 1896, the surplus income was ordered to be accumulated for twenty-one years from testator's death, i.e., until Nov. 6, 1914, or until the bachelor's previous death without leaving issue. During this twenty-one years' period the bachelor married & died leaving three children, two of whom were still living. Temporary orders for maintenance were made. On Nov. 12, 1914, it was declared that as from Nov. 6, 1914, the two children then living were entitled to maintenance under Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 43 (1) but that notwithstanding sect. 43 (2) any income not so applied passed as on an intestacy. On July 20, 1927, the elder child attained twenty-one, & her contingent moiety vested in possession. The question having arisen whether, having regard to Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 165, the order of Nov. 12, 1914, ought still to be acted on with regard to the younger child's contingent moiety :—Held : (1) the effect of sect. 165 was that the years of minority accumulation, which commenced during the twenty-one years' period, were not to be reckoned in ascertaining that period, & the income of the younger child's contingent moiety must in the first place be applied for her maintenance under Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 43 (1), & the balance could be validly accumulated under sect. 43 (2) ; (2) quite apart from sect. 165, the moment the elder child attained a vested interest as a member of the contingent class, there could be no question of intestacy as to any part of the capital or income.—*Re MABER, WARD v. to hold the net purchase-money already received & to be received in respect of a certain contract of sale upon trust, on the death of the survivor of the appointors, as to three several sums of £15,000 for each of three of their daughters, & as to £12,500 for their fourth daughter, & as to the "remainder" one moiety to each of their two sons. The contract of sale referred to was for a sum of £100,000, of which £20,000 had already been paid. The contract of sale was subsequently rescinded on the purchaser paying a further sum of £20,000:—Held: in the events which had happened, the principle that, where a person disposing of a sum among different persons acts on the assumption that he is dealing with a fund of specific amount, & gives part of the fund to one or more persons & the residue to another, if the fund falls short, all the gifts abate proportionately, would not apply, & the sons would get nothing under the gift of the "remainder."—*A'BECKETT v. 120. Add. Annotation :—Refd. Bean v. Flaxton R. D. C. (1928), 139 L. T. 320.

- 121a. ————.]—Pltfs., a firm of builders who had, as a private enterprise of their own, built a number of houses upon land situate within the jurisdiction of defts., had not complied with defts.' bye-laws as to the drainage, with the result that differences arose between the parties. Subsequently, by agreement, defts. appointed a sub-committee to settle all outstanding matters, & an agreement was arrived at between pltfs. & the sub-committee. One of the terms of that agreement was that pltfs.' drainage scheme should remain, although it was contrary to defts.' bye-laws. Defts. having repudiated the agreement to which their sub-committee was a party, pltfs. brought an action claiming specific performance :—Held : as it had not been established that the building of the houses by pltfs. was, or formed part of, a housing scheme to which Housing Act, 1925 (c. 14), s. 99, applied, the verbal contract made by the sub-committee was not binding on defts., for the reason that defts. could not confer upon the sub-committee a power of entering into any such contract. Neither had the Minister power under sect. 99 to relax the bye-laws in a private building scheme.—WILLIAM BEAN & SONS, LTD. v. FLAXTON RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL (1928), 139 L. T. 320; 92 J. A solr., acting for the administratrix of a deceased person's estate, employed a builder to collect the rents of three working-class houses, & to pay the proceeds over to him. The local authority having executed works under Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1919 (c. 35), s. 38 (see, now, Housing Act, 1925 (c. 14), s. 3), sought to recover the expenses from the solr. as "owner" within sect. 38:—Held: he was the owner, though he was not the person who received the rent directly from the tenants, as there might be more than one owner, & every one receiving the rent, as rent, in succession became the "owner."—*WATTS v. 598a. Injury to ganger—Duty to provide look-out man—Prevention of Accidents Rules, 1902, r. 9.]—The foreman of a gang in the employ of a railway co. was employed to repair some signalling apparatus on the permanent way, & took with him a member of his gang to assist him. Whilst engaged in working on the down line he with his fellow workman stepped off the line on the up line to avoid a down train & both men were killed by an up train. In an action by the widow of the foreman for damages against the co. for breach of statutory duty, the judge directed the jury that a regulation of the co. under which the foreman of a gang was entrusted with the duty of seeing that a look-out man was provided whenever he or any of his gang were at work upon the line was a compliance with r. 9. duty of providing a look-out man, & that the foreman's death was caused by the negligence of one or the other or both of the men, & judgment was entered for the co. :—Held : (1) a motion for a new trial, on the grounds of misdirection & that the verdict was against the weight of evidence, must be refused ; (2) the rule does not require the look-out man provided to be some one who is not a member of the gang itself, but is appointed additionally. (3) Seem : the duty of the railway co. under the rule in any case of danger is an absolute duty to provide a look-out man & to see that he is instructed to act. The co. does not comply with the rule by merely making regulations under which the foreman of a gang is entrusted with the duty of appointing a look-out man ; & if the foreman fails in that duty, the co. may be made liable for injury happening to a member of the gang other than the foreman himself.—*VINCENT v. spaces where none of the goods stored therein used railways, & all charges in respect of the conveyance on railways in docks in whatever circumstances the rails were laid or charges were made for their use ; (2) (BANKES, L.J.) under sect. 58 (4) of the above Act the Tribunal has to take into consideration the different operations which go to make up the business of a dock undertaking, for which operations separate & distinct charges are made ; (3) Seem (SCRUTTON, L.J.) : warehousing on a dock undertaking goods exported or imported, storing such goods in the open on dock lands, the use of transit sheds, & services such as cooping, are dock & not railway charges.—MANCHESTER SHIP CANAL CO.'S & DOCK & HARBOUR AUTHORITIES ASSOCN.'S APPLICATIONS, [1927] 2 K. - 37a. ———.]—Defts. were the overseers of a parish. Within the parish was a building, the property in which was vested in pltfs., managed by them in the early part of 1926 as an industrial school. After Mar. 1926 the building was no longer used as an industrial school & pltfs. removed their stores & furniture. The removal was completed in Apr. 1926, except that a caretaker was left in possession with a few articles of furniture for his use. In Mar. 1927 pltfs. decided to use the premises partly as an elementary school & partly for other purposes. Defts. rated pltfs. in respect of the building for the two periods ending Sept. 30, 1926, & Mar. 31, 1927, & it was admitted that the rate was duly made & confirmed. Pltfs. objected that the rate was invalid, as there was no beneficial occupation by them. Upon their refusing to pay, defts. complained to the justices, who issued a distress warrant, & defts. seized a tramcar belonging to pltfs. Pltfs. did not appeal to quarter sessions, but took proceedings in replevin :—Held : (1) pltfs. were not in beneficial occupation during the relevant period, & were not ratable ; (2) the jurisdiction of the justices to grant a distress warrant depended on the question of actual occupation within the parish & not on that of beneficial occupation, & as pltfs. had failed to show that the distress was unlawful, the action of replevin failed.—LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. Add the following case:—

1184a. Duty of rating authority to alter "then current rate"—On alteration of valuation list by assessment committee.]—Appls., in Jan. 1927, gave notice of objection to the valuation list, & relief was refused by the assessment committee. In Nov. 1927 the new assessment committee which came into being on Apr. 1, 1927, reconsidered applts.' objection & granted relief, as from Apr. 1, 1926. They altered the valuation list accordingly, but the rating authority refused to alter the rate book, on the ground that the assessment committee could not make their reconsidered decision relate back to the earlier rating period in which the objection had been originally taken & decided:—Held: it was the duty of the rating authority to alter their "then current rate" on receipt of notice from the assessment committee, & "then current rate" meant the rate current at the date of the objection.—KINGSTON MILL, STOCKPORT, LTD. v. - 1812a. ——— Shipment of goods before contract—Ship visiting other ports before issue of bill of lading.—A contract, dated July 2, provided for the sale of frozen rabbits & their shipment from Sydney c.i.f. Liverpool by a named steamer to sail during Aug. The bill of lading, which was dated Aug. 17, stated that the goods had been shipped by the steamer, then lying in Sydney. The steamer shipped the goods, or the bulk of them, at Sydney on June 25, when she proceeded to Queensland ports, thereafter returning to Sydney, & finally sailing from that port for Liverpool on Aug. 17. The buyers declined to take delivery of the goods, & the sellers claimed damages from them for breach of contract:—Held: the sellers were not entitled to recover, inasmuch as they had themselves committed breaches of the contract, by supplying goods the shipment of which had already taken place before the date of the contract of sale, & by tendering a bill of lading the issue of which had been delayed for so long as seven weeks after the shipment, the steamer having in the meantime visited other ports several hundred miles from the port of shipment.—FOREMAN & ELLAMS, LTD. v. BLACKBURN, [1928] 2 K. B. 60; 97 L. J. K. B. 355; 139 L. T. 68; 33 Com. Cas. 359; 17 Asp. M. L. C. 461.

- 1814a. Date of shipment incorrectly stated.—The seller under a c.i.f. contract is bound to procure & tender to the buyer a bill of lading which shall correctly state the date of shipment.
- Where the seller under a c.i.f. contract, under which delivery is to be made in a specified month, tenders to the buyer a bill of lading in which the date of shipment is incorrectly stated, the shipment in fact not taking place in the month specified in the contract, the buyer, being deprived of his right to reject the tender of documents, is entitled to damages for the breach by the seller of his obligation to deliver a correct bill of lading, the measure of which is the difference between the market price & the contract price of the goods sold where the contract price is higher than the market price.—JAMES FINLAY & CO. v. - 1104a. Sale by vendor in specified capacity.]—Where, in a vendor & purchaser contract, it is stated that the vendor will make title in a specified capacity, the contract does not amount to a warranty that he will make title in a particular manner. The warranty is no more than a warranty that a good title shall be made; & the purchaser can be forced to accept such good title, even though made by the vendor in a capacity other than that specified.
- By special conditions of sale, subject to which two houses were sold by auction, it was stated that the vendors were selling as "trustees for sale" under the will of A. On examination of the title by the purchasers, it appeared that no trust for sale was contained in the will:—Held: the above statement did not affect the powers of the vendors to make a good title as the legal personal representatives of A.—Re SPENCER & HAUSER'S CONTRACT, [1928] Ch. 598; 97 L. One of the tenants for life died in the lifetime of the settlor. A summons was taken out by the Public Trustee for the direction of the ct. as to the application of the accumulations of income of the share of the tenant for life who died in the lifetime of the settlor, having regard to the facts that (a) no grandchild of the settlor had attained the age of twenty-one years, or being female had married, at the death of the settlor; (b) one of the grandchildren of the settlor was born after the dates, when two of such grandchildren had attained the age of twenty-one years, & (c) a grandchild of the settlor, who survived the settlor, died under the age of twenty-one years:—Held: (1) the property from which the accumulated income arose must be regarded as the share to which the infant would become ultimately entitled, even though that share might be reduced by reason of other members of the class coming into existence; (2) the share of the grandchild, who had died under the age of twenty-one years, which had been provisionally assigned to that grandchild, ought to be treated as not having been properly assigned, & that portion of the money which had accrued while the infant was a member of the class, & which had not been applied in the maintenance & education of the infant, ought to be reassigned amongst the other persons who were at that time members of the class;

The settlement under which the land so stood limited was a compound settlement, consisting of various documents, including two deeds of 1911 & 1913. In due course a vesting deed was executed in favour of A. A. died on Dec. 4, 1926, & probate, limited to the settled land, was granted to the trustees of the compound settlement as his special representatives, on the footing that that settlement did not come to an end on his death. There were separate trustees of the two deeds of 1911 & 1913. Clause 11 of the 1911 deed gave to the trustees thereof all the powers conferred on a tenant for life by Settled Land Acts, 1882 to 1890:—Held: (1) the whole legal estate, the subject-matter of the settlement, was not held upon trust for sale; (2) in view of clause 11 of the 1911 deed the trustees of the two deeds of 1911 & 1913 were persons on whom Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 23 (1), conferred the powers of a tenant for life, & they were statutory owners under the compound settlement; & when they sold the land they would sell it as statutory owners & not as trustees for sale, & they must pay over the proceeds of sale to the trustees of the compound settlement.—*Re NORTON, PINNEY v. Part XV.—Land Held in Undivided Shares.

3138. For the existing paragraph substitute the following paragraph:—

——— Settled land.—By the will of testator, who died in 1884, his real estate was devised to trustees upon trust to permit his widow to receive the rents thereof during her life, & after her decease upon trust to pay same to or for the benefit of such of his two daughters, E. & M., as should be then living & should for the time being be single & unmarried in equal shares if more than one, & when both should be married upon trust as to both capital as well as income for all testator's children in equal shares. Testator's widow died in 1889, & on the death of E., in 1927, questions arose as to the respective interests of E. & M. & testator's children in the income & capital of the real estate. The ct. having decided that E. & M. were entitled to the income of the real estate during their joint lives in equal shares, & upon the death of E. her sister M. became entitled to the whole of the income during her spinsterhood, & upon her marriage or death the whole estate would become divisible in equal shares between the children of testator, the further question arose whether, on Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), coming into force, the devised real estate vested in the then surviving trustee of the will upon the statutory trusts under Sched. I., Part IV., par. 1 (1), or in her or the Public Trustee under par. 1 (3):—Held: (1) as the purposes of the trusts of testator's will were such as might continue beyond the life of his widow, the real estate devised by the will was, at the date of Law of Property Act, 1925, coming into force, by the effect of Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), s. 31, vested in the then surviving trustee of the will in fee simple in trust for E. & M., who were then beneficially interested in equity until one of them should marry or die in undivided shares vested in possession; (2) although their interests were not absolute interests, the case fell within Sched. I., Part IV., par. 1 (1), & the real estate thereupon vested in the trustee of the will upon the statutory trusts; (3) when a case fell within par. 1 (1) it did not become necessary to consider whether it fell within any of the subsequent sub-paragraphs.—Re DAWSON'S SETTLED ESTATES, [1928] Ch. 421; 97 L. Land held under one & same settlement—Vesting in trustees—Who are trustees.]—Where immediately before the coming into operation of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), the entirety of the land is settled land held under one & the same settlement, it vests in the trustees, if any, of the settlement under the old law as joint tenants upon the statutory trusts. If there are no such trustees then, pending their appointment, the land vests in the Public Trustee upon the statutory trusts.—Re CATCHPOOL,

- 319a. ——— Liability of owner requesting local authority to lay connecting pipe.—Subject to the rights of a corpn. as highway & sewer authority, pltf. owned the soil of a public road with a sewer therein. Deft.'s property abutted on this road, as well as on another sewered road, & he was entitled under

Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 21, to cause his drains to empty into the corpn.'s sewers, on giving proper notice & complying with regulations. At deft.'s request & acting under their local Act, the corpn. connected deft.'s combined drain with the sewer in pltf.'s road, carrying the connecting pipe through a small portion of pltf.'s subsoil :—Held : the corpn.'s acts were fully justified by the local Act, even if not by Public Health Acts, & whatever right for compensation pltf. might have against the corpn. for damage sustained by reason of the exercise of their statutory powers, he had no cause of action against deft. for requesting the corpn. to exercise those powers.—GRANT v.

He sued defts. for damages, basing his action on a breach of a statutory regulation made under 1894 Act, which provided for the fencing & protection of open hatchways on ships :—Held : pltf.'s own contributory negligence was an answer to his claim against defts. based on a breach of statutory duty.—DEW v. UNITED BRITISH S.S. Co., Ltd. (1928), 139 L. T. 628, C. A.

1780a. Breach of duty—Broker assuming to charter vessel to himself—Ratification of wrongful act.—Pltfs., owners of the D., instructed H., a broker, to procure a charterparty for their ship. H. being minded, in breach of his duty as a broker, to make use of the ship for his own ends, purported to effect a charterparty dated Aug. 9, 1926, between pltfs. & an export co. of Danzig " & others " as charterers. This document was signed by H. " as agent only " for the owners & by H. " on behalf of the charterers as per separate chartering notes." By one of the clauses of the document the shipowners were to have a lien for all dead freight & demurrage at the port of loading. H. had no authority to act on behalf of the export co., who knew nothing about the transaction. Defts., timber merchants in London, bought from S. & Co., shippers in Danzig, red wood at a price including cost, freight & insurance from Danzig to London. S. & Co. engaged cargo space for the wood on board the D., by means of chartering notes signed by H. purporting to act " by order of the owners," but without their authority, & the wood was shipped on board the D. at Danzig under bills of lading signed by H. purporting to act for & on behalf of & with the authority of the master. Each bill of lading incorporated the terms, conditions & clauses of the so-called charterparty of Aug. 9, among which was the above lien clause. The bills of lading were indorsed by S. & Co. & tendered under the contract of sale to defts., who accepted them & paid S. & Co. for the goods. The D. left Danzig without a full cargo several days after the lay days had expired. When she arrived in London the master deposited the wood with wharfingers subject to a lien in favour of pltfs. for dead freight & demurrage, & pltfs. brought an action against defts. for a declaration that they were entitled to the lien :—Held : the lien clause in the document of Aug. 9 was incorporated in the bills of lading, on the grounds that (1) pltfs., by taking the cargo on board their ship & issuing bills of lading in respect of it after they knew of H.'s breach of duty in assuming to charter their vessel to himself, had ratified his act & so validated the charterparty, & (2) the incorporation of the lien clause was not in any way dependent or contingent upon the charterparty being a valid or effective document, for in the absence of a condition to the contrary, one document, or part thereof, might be incorporated in another, although the first document had, of itself, no legal effect whatever ; (3) defts. could not support a plea in avoidance of circuity of action, because it was essential to that plea that the amount recoverable by deft. pleading it from pltf. in the action in which it was pleaded should be the exact amount recoverable by pltf. from him ; & as S. & Co. were not parties to the action, it could not be averred that the damages, if any, recoverable by defts. from S. & Co. for breach of the contract of sale would be the same in amount as the sum recoverable by pltf. from defts. under the terms of the bills of lading, & it did not appear that S. & Co. had any cause of action against pltf., whose liabilities depended upon the bills of lading.—*AKT. - 2230a. ———.]—Defts. bought timber to be shipped to Liverpool, & it was shipped in pltf.'s steamer along with the cargo of other shippers. The bill of lading was a clean bill, stating that a specified quantity had been shipped in good condition, & incorporating the terms of the charterparty, which provided that the statements in the bill of lading as to the goods having been shipped in good condition, & as to the aggregate number of pieces delivered to the steamer, should be conclusive evidence against the shipowner. At the time of signing the bill of lading the master signed a protest stating that part of defts.' goods was in bad condition. Defts. were indorsees of the bill of lading, & after the arrival of the steamer pltf. informed them that part of the cargo had been damaged before shipment. There being nothing to indicate to defts. that the damaged part belonged to them, defts. accepted the bill of lading, when presented, & they paid for the timber. On delivery they found that the timber was defective, & that the quantity was less than the specified quantity. The shipowner sued defts. for balance of freight, & defts. counterclaimed for damages for delivering part of the goods in a damaged condition, & for failing to deliver part of the goods shipped:—Held: as the information of defts. was not of such a nature as to justify them in rejecting the bill of lading, pltf. was estopped from disputing the statements in it, & defts. were entitled to succeed on their counterclaim.—*EVANS v. 4248a. ———.]—Resps. insured claimant's steamer by a policy providing that general average was to be adjusted according to the York-Antwerp Rules of 1924. The ship was chartered to go to Bordeaux to load for Cardiff, the charterparty also providing that average, if any, should be settled according to those rules. During loading at Bordeaux the foremast broke, & damage was done to the ship. For the purpose of repair she was moved to another dock within the port, & the shipowners incurred expenses as follows: wages & provisions of crew, cost of handling & discharging cargo for the purpose of repairs, cost of coal consumed in going in & out & keeping steam up, expense of towing in & out & mooring & port expenses, & cost of coal consumed in shifting the vessel. While staying at Bordeaux the ship was in no danger. On completion of repairs & loading she left for Cardiff, & while she was at sea she fouled some wreckage without any negligence of those on board her, & though there was no immediate danger she was made unfit to encounter the ordinary perils of the sea, & the master put into Cherbourg, as a port of refuge, & had repairs effected. The expenses at Cherbourg were similar to those at Bordeaux:—Held: (1) the cost of repairs in each case was recoverable as particular average; (2) the other expenses at Bordeaux could not be claimed as general average, since no danger was in operation there; (3) the other expenses at Cherbourg could be claimed as general average since, though there was no immediate danger, the vessel was not fit, without repair, to encounter the perils of the sea.—VLASSOPOULOS v. - 6809a. ————.]—A ketch belonging to defts. sank, owing to their negligence, in a river, of which first pl'ts. were the conservators, & thereby obstructed the navigation of the river & second pl'ts.' wharf & the approaches thereto. Immediately after the sinking of the ketch, & before any expenses were incurred in removing her, defts. abandoned her. Pl'ts. jointly incurred expenses in removing the obstruction, & sued to recover the amount from defts. :—Held : (1) the ketch having sunk through the negligence of defts., they became liable at common law for the damage caused by the obstruction to the navigation of the river & the blocking of the approach to the wharf, & they could not escape liability for that damage by abandoning the wreck; (2) the damages recoverable were the reasonable cost of removing the obstruction.—DEE CONSERVANCY BOARD v. 8715a. —.—Pltf., a lighterman, was in charge of a barge, which was being taken from a dock through a lock. The dock & lock were both the property of defts. While pltf. was navigating the barge under the orders & directions of defts., a rope attached to the barge broke & struck pltf., causing him personal injuries. Pltf. had no option to refuse to take the rope on board. Defts. relied on the terms of a notice, exhibited on the pierhead of the lock, to the effect that lightermen availing themselves of the facilities & assistance of defts.' servants must do so at their own risk, & upon the understanding that no liability whatsoever should attach to defts. or their servants for any injury from whatever cause arising to or by the craft or to or by any person on board thereof :—Held : the words of the above notice were prima facie adequate to exempt defts. from liability for the negligence of their servants, & the fact that pltf. as compelled to regulate the barge according to the directions of the dockmaster was in no way inconsistent with the fact that he was in the circumstances "availing himself of the facilities & assistance" of defts., & did not deprive defts. of the exemption afforded by the notice. —*WICKETT v. 8755a. —.—.—.—.—The C. M. was requisitioned on behalf of the Crown in 1917 by a charterparty, which provided that the Crown should not be liable for marine risks, but should be liable for "all consequences of hostilities or warlike operations." Whilst so requisitioned, the C. M. sailed from New York in convoy, destined for Nantes, then a war base, but also an ordinary commercial port, with a cargo, 84 per cent. of which in weight was for the civil commissariat, & 16 per cent. in weight was for war purposes. She was the third ship in the second column from the port hand in the convoy, another vessel, the W. F., which admittedly was at all material times engaged upon & carrying out a warlike operation, being in the corresponding position on the port column. While the convoy was proceeding at night without lights the steering-gear of the C. M. suddenly broke down, she sheered seven points off her course & came across the bows of the W. F., by which she was struck & sunk. There was no negligence on the part of those on board the C. M. :—Held : (1) the arbitrator was entitled to find that the C. M. was at no material time engaged, upon or carrying out a warlike operation, notwithstanding a portion of her cargo consisted of war material ; (2) the loss of the C. M. was not the consequence of a warlike operation, inasmuch as the dominant & direct cause of the loss was the break-down of her steering-gear & her sheering off her course.—*CLAN LINE STEAMERS, LTD. v.
